CITY AIDS HUNT FOR LOST BOY

The plea of the mother of Richard D'Arcy, the missing Cambridge boy, that the city drag the treacherous Gendreau pit, in the rear of the D'Arcy home at No. 42 Chilton street, Cambridge, resulted in a conference today between Mayor J. Edward Barry and Commissioner of Public Safety Henry J. Cunningham of Cambridge. At the conference, the city government officially took a hand in the search for the missing boy.

Mayor Barry this afternoon said a special boat had been obtained for work on the pit. He declared the city would do all in its power to aid the parents of the D'Arcy boy.

Mrs. Mary D'Arcy, the lad's mother, went to Gendreau pit today, she said she knew her boy, who has been missing since Saturday, has been drowned. She had just returned from a vain search in the Belmont woods, where she went early today with a lunch basket. Up till today she believed her son was still alive.

In a statement following his conference with Commissioner Cunningham, Mayor Barry said:

I have had a conference with Commissioner of Public Safety Henry J. Cunningham. He has assured me that everything is being done in the search for the missing boy. All of the ponds will be dragged and the woods will be scoured. A special boat has been secured for work on the dangerous Gendreau pit. The city stands ready at all times to cooperate with the parents of the child. We will do all in our power to aid them.

Mother's Pathetic Plea.

The mother, Mrs. D'Arcy, made a pathetic plea to the mothers of Cambridge to help her find her boy.

"Oh, I know he's in there," she said, as she gazed out into the pool, littered with rubbish and cans that make it almost impossible to discern where the water ends and the bank begins. "He never wandered away before. I know he's in there. Oh, help me find him. I call on the women of Cambridge. I call on the Mayor to help me find my boy. Oh, why don't they?

Gazing out on the treacherous surface of Gendreau Pit, a pool of water behind her home at No. 32 Chilton street, Cambridge, Mrs. Mary D'Arcy today declared that she knew her boy, Richard, who has been missing since Saturday, was drowned. She had just returned from a fruitless search of Belmont Woods, whither she went early today with a lunch basket, and resigned herself to the belief that her boy was dead. Up to today she had held to the belief that he was still alive.

"Oh, I know he's in there," she said, as she gazed out on the pool, littered with rubbish and cans that make it almost impossible to discern where the water ends and the bank begins. ### PARK BLUEBERRIES KILL LITTLE GIRL

As a result of eating blueberries picked in the Middlesex Fells Reservation, which had been sprayed with poison to kill moths, nine-year-old Elizabeth Moriarty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy D. Moriarty, of No. 9 Vine street, Melrose, died yesterday at her home, suffering great agony.

Accompanied by several friends, the little girl spent the day picnicking in the Fells. All ate blueberries. Some of the other children were affected but not so seriously as Elizabeth. She was a pupil in St. Mary's parochial school.

Mob Suffragettes Who Fired Theatre On Way to Be Tried

DUBLIN, Aug. 6.—Four of the eight suffragettes who were arrested here on the occasion of the visit of Premier Asquith in the middle of July were arraigned today charged with attempting to burn the Theatre Royal while it was crowded, and also with attempting to take Mr. Asquith's life by hurling a hatchet at him when he was riding through the city in an open carriage with his wife. Among the defendants is Gladys Evans, described by the police as the "most troublesome suffragette in the United Kingdom." She has been arrested nine times for assault and destruction of property. Another is Mrs. Mary A. Leigh, a lawyer, who insisted on defending herself.

The other two defendants gave the names of Miss Emma Baker and Miss Mary Copper. It was decided to try the Evans woman first, as gunpowder and dynamite were found in her rooms. It is believed that she had planned to blow up the Theatre Royal.

A mob in front of the court tried to seize the women and the demonstration assumed such proportions police reserves had to be called.

The Evans woman's trial was ruined and the jury returned a verdict of guilty, but sentence was deferred until the other cases were heard.

MASS MEETING FOR PLAYGROUND

The 60,000 residents of Wards 1 and 2, East Boston, now thoroughly aroused over the city's neglect in providing a water front play ground for their children have decided to give expression to their feelings in a mass meeting to be held on Friday night of this week in Lower Commonwealth Hall.

Already nine prominent men have volunteered to address the meeting. They are:

Rev. Father Joseph Fitzgerald, of the Church of the Assumption.

Max I. Pinansky, president of the Young Men's Hebrew Association.

John J. Douglass, former representative for East Boston.

Ralph E. Hawley, superintendent of the Opportunity Club.

Francis A. O'Neil, former State representative from East Boston.

James E. Fitzgerald, attorney of Ward 2.

Rabbi Joseph David Jermin of Ohel Jareb Synagogue.

Vincenzo Bonzagni, real estate dealer.

Edward Jenkins of Ward 1.

Other speakers will be announced later. The meeting will be held at 8 o'clock. The doors will be open at 7:30.

These speakers will call upon the community to once more unite upon a common issue that will take no account of political party nor religious creed, for the water front park will be of inestimable value to the whole community.

The protection of the East Boston children and their future welfare is to be treated as a matter of vital importance to every one living on the island. It will be shown that the care of hundreds of children now running the streets unprotected and open to the demoralizing influence of the street corners is not a matter of party, but one of simple humanity, of vital concern to parents of every nationality and creed.

REBELS SCATTERED IN CASAS GRANDES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Advices received by the State Department today from the Consul at Culiad Juarez states that the federals have captured Casas Grandes and the rebels have been scattered. From indications, the report states, the district will be in complete control of the federals in a week. General Orozco, the rebel leader, still is at Juarez. The Consul at Nogales reports federal soldiers met an armed band of Yaqui Indians on August 4 nine miles west of Nogales, near the border, and after an engagement in which four soldiers were killed the Indians were driven away.

"VINEGAR KING," 75, WED TO NIECE, 19

POUGHKEEPSIE, Aug. 6.—Friends of Stephen Scutt, seventy-five, of Verbank, known as the Vinegar King, learned today that nearly a week ago he had married his pretty grandniece, Miss Alice Soo, nineteen.

SEEKING NEW YORK GUNMEN IN LEICESTER

"Lefty Louie" and "Gyp the Blood," wanted for the Rosenthal murder, are in hiding in the town of Leicester, Worcester County, according to the belief of detectives today. The local police have been called in to assist the New York detectives. The New York gun men rented a house in Leicester and are believed to be hiding there now. The house is watched.

Ten detectives are now on the trail of the men. They are believed to be in the South part of the town, what is commonly known as the "Wilderness," region of the Wood-Morgan and three of the Burns detectives are at work. When the capture is made, it will be the Burns men who will do the collaring. One of the Burns men has gone to New York with Levy.

Detectives in Boston prepared to watch every person who boarded the liner Franconia which sails for Liverpool from Boston this afternoon in the hope of capturing one or more of the Rosenthal gun men who may attempt to escape to Europe.

Chief James Quinn of the Leicester police, assisted by four of the town constables, are making a house-to-house canvass of the foreign colony of the town.

These latest developments in connection with the hunt for the three gunmen fully explain the visit to Worcester of Aaron J. Levy, counsel for Louis Libbey and William Shapiro, owners of the car that the Rosenthal slayers used. Levy returned to New York last night where he expressed confidence that the suspects would soon be captured.

TWO KILLED IN AUTO RACING ANOTHER CAR

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 6.—Racing with another car at sixty miles an hour, an automobile containing a party of society young men and women struck a telephone pole early today, killing two and injuring another. Two other occupants of the car were uninjured. The dead: Alice Mullin, 21; Edward Alford, 19, son of James Alford, chairman of the State Fish and Game Commission. The two cars were running to this city from a party when the race started. As one car was going around a corner it skidded and crashed up against a telephone pole, turning turtle and crumpling like a berry box. Frederick Waltsanger, who was driving, received injuries from which he is not expected to live.

STATE BOARD'S DECISION ON L CASES DELAYED

The State Board of Arbitration and Conciliation did not report today on the question whether the striking motormen of the Elevated Company should be restored to their former ratings, or begin at the bottom again.

It was expected that the finding on the important issues raised by the strikers and the public would be ready today, but Chairman Howard announced late this noon that the matter was so involved the Board of Arbitration desired more time to weigh all phases properly. He could not predict what day the report would be ready. Both sides eagerly await the outcome.

The "loyalists," the men who remained in the employ of the company, contend that as a result they should be permitted to keep the ratings to which they were advanced when the strikers left.

The strikers claim they should be given their old ratings, once and runs. This problem confronted the men in the Elevated Company consented to restore the union men.

It was such a complex one that an agreement was reached to by the Board of Arbitration near both sides and to abide by the board's decision. Attorney James H. Vahey appeared for the strikers and former Attorney General Herbert Parker for the loyalists.

The hearing on the question of rating and incidental issues lasted days.

Incubator Keeps Dorchester Woman's Quadruplets Alive

Four wee baby girls were patients today in an incubator at the Dorchester Cottage Hospital, while their mother, Mrs. F. H. Seely of No. 60 Sawyer street, Dorchester, begs to see her "baby," as she says, They are the first quadruplets born at the hospital and the nurses fought to save their lives.

Two weigh three and a half pounds each, one weighs four and a half pounds, and one four pounds and a quarter.

Every effort is being made to keep them alive. At present they seem to be doing well. They lie side by side in the incubator, which it is hoped, will nurse them through the first part of their existence.

The quadruplets were born within five minutes of each other last night.

TURKS MASSACRE BULGARIANS FOR A BOMB OUTRAGE

SALONIKA, European Turkey, Aug. 5.—Turkish gendarmes and soldiers have massacred many Bulgarian inhabitants of Kochana to avenge a recent bomb outrage, according to word received today. More than 100 persons were killed by the explosion of an infernal machine at Kochana, most of the victims being Turks and Turkish sympathizers.

DRIVE TURKS FROM TRIPOLITAN FORTS

TRIPOLI, Aug. 6.—A battle between Italians and Turks is being fought at Zenara, on the coast. The Italians began extensive operations by land and sea, and late dispatches said the attacking force was meeting with success. The Turks, however, fought with great stubbornness in their fortification before being driven out. Then they continued the battle at East Zenara. While the Italians were being landed, the warships kept up a continuous bombardment and the Italians were able to land without resistance.

HURT UNDER OWN WAGON

Peter Sweeney of Mack's court, Waltham, was hurt severely yesterday in the yard of the Boston Manufacturing Company's cotton mill. The coal cart he was driving tipped, and Sweeney fell so the wheels passed over him. At the Waltham Hospital it was said he could not live.

COLONEL TELLS DELEGATES WHAT HE STANDS FOR

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—The great feature of the second day's session of the Progressive Party's National Convention was the speech of Theodore Roosevelt, the prospective presidential nominee, defining the policies and purposes of the new party.

This was Roosevelt's own day at the convention. The former President prepared for his speech by holding a number of conferences with the party leaders at his hotel.

"I never felt better in my life," exclaimed the Colonel as he appeared in a dressing gown with a sheaf of letters in one hand and a bundle of newspapers in the other. Among his early visitors were E. H. Abbott, son of Lyman Abbott of the Outlook; W. D. Fairly of Alabama, Hugh T. Halbert of Minnesota, A. B. Cole of Kentucky, and Matthew Hale of Boston.

The Colonel was escorted to the convention by a great body of enthusiastic followers. The parade from the Congress Hotel to the Coliseum was marked by one of the greatest demonstrations ever seen in a convention city.

COLONEL ROOSEVELT'S SPEECH.

A summary of Colonel Roosevelt's speech follows:

The speech strikes a keynote for his followers and supporters in the new party. It lays down the plan of battle to be waged by the National Progressive party. He discusses those principles under twelve subdivisions, namely, The Helplessness of the Old Parties; The Right of the People to Rule; The Courts and the People; Constructive Control of the Trusts; Rights of the Wage-Worker; The Farmer; The Tariff; The High Cost of Living; Currency; Conservation; Alaska and International Affairs. "The two old parties," he said, "are husks, with no real soul within either, divided on artificial lines, bossridden and privilege controlled, each a jumble of incongruous elements, and neither daring to speak out wisely and fearlessly what should be said on the vital issues of the day." As opposed to this incongruity and insincerity of action he asserted that the National Progressive platform will be "a contract with the people," with definite and concrete provisions to be carried out if the people ratify the contract on election day as exactly and honestly "as if it were actually enforceable under the law."

No Help From Old Machines.

Neither the Republican nor the Democratic platforms or managers show adequate recognition of the mighty fact "that we are now in the midst of a great economic evolution." This irresistible movement for economic change and improvement must be guided by "both common sense and the highest ethical standards," in order to prevent the economic evolution from becoming dangerous revolution. The Democratic party, as is indicated by its present record in Congress, lacks the common sense, and the Republican party, by its record of stolen delegates at the Chicago convention, lacks the ethical standards.

The men who presided over the Chicago and Baltimore conventions and the great bosses who controlled the two conventions—Mr. Root and Mr. Parker, Mr. Barnes and Mr. Murphy, Mr. Penrose and Mr. Taggart, Mr. Guggenheim and Mr. Sullivan—differ from one another, of course, on certain points, but those are the differences which one corporation lawyer has with another corporation lawyer when acting for different corporations. They come together at once as against a common enemy when the dominion of both is threatened by the supremacy of the people of the United States. * * * * If this country is ready to go forward along a path of social and economic justice, there must be a new party of Nation-wide and non-sectional principles, a party where the tithed National chiefs and the real States leaders shall be in genuine accord, a party in whose councils the people shall be supreme, a party that shall represent in the Nation and the several States alike the same cause, the cause of human rights and of governmental efficiency. The reassertion of the States rights doctrine of the Democratic party cripples and forecloses any real or genuine

Governor Wilson Going 50 Miles in 80 Minutes by Auto

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 5.—In Adjutant General Wilbur F. Aldes's six cylinder auto, Governor Wilson today covered the distance from Sesgrit to Trenton, fifty miles, flat, in eighty minutes, taking his life in his hands and disregarding all speed laws. Over straight stretches of good road the machine went fifty miles an hour. Through towns the chauffeur slowed down a trifle, though he was far from obeying the warning signs calling for ten miles an hour. The Governor was followed by another automobile carrying the newspaper correspondents, but they soon were left far behind. The fast trip was made necessary by the tardiness of Secretary Joe Tumulty, who overslept this morning. The Governor was scheduled to leave Seagrit at 7:45, but it was 8:30 before Tumulty appeared.

The Governor kept his appointment with a delegation of Delaware Democrats scheduled for 10 o'clock. The Governor will call tonight on Governor Thomas R. Marshall of Indiana, his running mate, at the New Monmouth Hotel, Spring Lake.

FRESNO DAN AND WILLIAM C. MUM AT MEALS

William C. Russell went on the witness stand today at the Russell will hearing in East Cambridge.

In answer to Attorney Scharton he admitted that he hadn't talked very much to Fresno Dan, whom he has accepted as his long lost brother, but explained that he didn't talk much with anybody.

Mr. Russell didn't think it strange that Fresno Dan couldn't remember the color of his mother's eyes.

William C. Russell is the elder son of the late Senator Daniel Russell of Melrose, whose fortune started the celebrated Identity contest, and, with Ferdinand R. Almy, is an executor of the will.

His examination by Mr. Scharton was checked last week on objection of Mr. Nason, counsel for the will, who argued that the testimony of Mr. Russell and other witnesses for the respondents was premature. There was a debate on law points, and Master Pevear ruled in favor of Mr. Scharton, who finished with Mr. Almy and recalled Mr. Russell this morning.

Mr. Scharton is to summon federal officials as witnesses. He is to lay stress on the alleged forging of postmarks on certain letters introduced at the first hearing. Postoffice officials and others from Washington will be called in, he says, in order to clear up this very important feature of the case.

Scharton today again charged that Fresno was accepted as a result of a conspiracy to defraud Dakota Dan.

"We want the books of the expenditures of the estate," said Scharton, "to show that a conspiracy existed and now exists to defraud the claimant. We claim, first, that the hurried identity of Fresno Dan was made to cover up a defalcation of the estate of Daniel Russell; second, that Almy's interest ever William C. Russell was why he accepted Fresno Dan as his brother, he not knowing how much the estate had been looted.

confidence for morning papers of Tuesday, August 6.

relief to the people. It reduces their promises to hopeless and empty phrases. The mission and spirit of this Progressive movement will thrill the Republic from end to end.

Right of People to Rule.

"The actions of the Chicago convention, and to an only less degree of the Baltimore convention, have shown in striking fashion how little the people do, still under our present conditions." In order to assure this popular rule Mr. Roosevelt urged the adoption of presidential primaries, popular election of senators, the short ballot, an efficient corrupt practices act, qualified use of the initiative, referendum and recall. The recall should be applied to administrative officers. Mr. Roosevelt asserts that the adoption of these new methods of political administration is not antagonistic to representative government.

All I desire to do by securing more direct control of the governmental agents and representatives of the people is to give the people the chance to make their representatives really represent them whenever the government becomes misrepresentative instead of representative. I have not come to this way of thinking from a closet study or as a mere matter of theory; I have been forced to it by a long experience with the actual conditions of our political life.

Courts and the People.

Under this head Mr. Roosevelt strongly emphasizes the necessity of the sovereign people preserving a check on every branch of public service. Under this head Mr. Roosevelt reiterates his now well-known views regarding the courts. "The American people, and not the courts, are to determine their own fundamental policies." This does not mean that the people are to interfere in cases which involve merely questions of justice between individuals except that "means should be devised for making it easier than at present to get rid of an incompetent judge."

But when a judicial decision involves an interpretation of what the people mean by the constitutions which they have framed and laws passed by the people are nullified because the courts say those laws are contrary to the people's will as expressed in their Constitution, there must be a reference to the people of the public effect of such decisions under forms securing full deliberation, to the end that the people may rectify this alleged defect in their Constitution by a popular vote barring all the force of a Constitutional amendment.

Our purpose is not to impugn the courts, but to emancipate them from a position whereby they stand finally in the way of social progress." I am well aware that every upholder of privilege, every hired agent or beneficiary of the special interests, including many well meaning parlor reformers, will denounce all this as "Socialism" or "anarchy"—the same terms they used in the past in denouncing the movements to control the railroads and to control public utilities. As a matter of fact the opposition to make constitute neither anarchy nor Socialism, but, on the contrary, a corrective of Socialism and an antidote to anarchy.

Control of the Trusts.

In addition to punishment for wrongdoing by the trusts, the imperative demand is effective and complete regulation. The views of President Van Hise, of the University of Wisconsin, in his scientific work on trust regulation are in harmony with the programme of the National Progressives. "The present condition of business cannot be accepted as satisfactory. The reason for this is explained, in Mr. Roosevelt's opinion, by the fact that "those dealing with the subject have attempted to divide into two camps, each as unwise as the other."

One camp has fixed its attention only on the need of prosperity—"prosperity to the big men on top, trusting to their mercy to let something leak through to the mass of their countrymen below, which, in effect, means that there should be no attempt to regulate the ferocious scramble in which greed and cunning reap the largest rewards.

The other camp has so fixed its attention upon the injustices of the distribution of prosperity, "omitting all consideration of having something to distribute, and advocates action which, it is true, would abolish most of the inequalities of the distribution of prosperity, by only the unfortunately simple process of abolishing the prosperity itself."

The leaders of those now in control of the Republican party is to give special privileges to "big business," and to correct the evils of such a course when they become crying, by prosecuting lawsuits under the Anti-Trust Law.

Criticizes Democrats.

The tendency of the Democrats, judged by their record in Congress and by the Democratic platform, is to abolish all business of any size or efficiency, on the ground that all bigness is badness, and littleness and weakness a sign of virtue. "What is needed is action directly the reverse of that thus confusedly indicated." There should be applied to all industrial concerns engaged in inter-State commerce in which there is either monopoly or control of the market the principles already adopted "in regulating transportation concerns engaged in such commerce.

The Anti-Trust Law should be kept on the statute book to be invoked against every big concern tending to monopoly or guilty of anti-social practices. At rare times a National Industrial Commission should be created which should have complete power to regulate and control all the great industrial concerns engaged in interstate business—which practically means all of them in this country. This commission should exercise over those industrial concerns like powers in those exercised over the railways by the Interstate Commerce Commission and over the national banks by the Controller of the Currency, and additional powers if found necessary. The commission "should have free access to the books of each corporation and power to find out exactly how it treats its employes, its rivals and the general public. . . . Any corporation voluntarily coming under the commission should not be prosecuted under the Anti-Trust Law as long as it obeys in good faith the orders of the commission. The commission would be able to interpret in advance to any honest man asking the interpretation what he may do and what he may not do in carrying on a legitimate business. When corporations not submitting themselves to the regulation of the commission or clearly evading or violating its orders are prosecuted under the Anti-Trust Law and convicted, the commission should have the duty of seeing "that the decree of the court is put into effect completely."

"Gross Scandals."

Only in this way can there be avoided "such gross scandals as those attendant upon the present administration's prosecution of the Standard Oil and the Tobacco Trusts," a prosecution which has merely resulted in increased prices to the public, injury to the small competitor, and actual financial benefit to the trusts themselves.

The Progressive proposal is definite. It is practicable. We promise nothing that we cannot carry out, we promise nothing which will jeopardize honest business. . . . Our proposal is to help honest business activity, however extensive, and to see that it is rewarded with fair return, so that there may be no oppression either of business men or the common people.

We propose to make it worth while for our business men to develop the most efficient business agencies for use in international trade; for it is to the interest of our whole people that we should do well in international business. But we propose to make those business agencies do complete justice to our own people. Where those concerns deal with the necessaries of life, the commission should not shrink, if the necessity is proved, from going to the extent of exercising regulation and control over the conditions that create or determine monopoly prices.

It is imperative to the welfare of our people that we enlarge and extend our foreign commerce. We are pre-eminently fitted to do this because as a people we have developed high skill in the art of manufacturing; our business men are strong executives, strong organizers. In every way possible our Federal Government should co-operate in this important matter.

Any one who has had opportunity to study and observe Great Britain's and Germany's course in this respect must realize that their policy of co-operation between government and business has been in comparatively few years made them a leading competitor for the commerce of the world. It should be remembered that they are doing this on a national scale and with large units of business, while the Democratic party would have us believe that we should do it with small units of business, which would be controlled not by the National government, but by forty-nine conflicting State sovereignties. Such a policy is utterly out of keeping with the progress of the times and gives our great commercial rivals of Europe—hungry for international markets—golden opportunities of which they are rapidly taking advantage.

Justice to Wage-Workers.

Referring to the opening sentence of his address, namely, "that we are now in the midst of a great economic revolution," Mr. Roosevelt presents an advanced and comprehensive plan to insure the rights and better conditions for labor. He gives it the paramount place in his speech.

The first charge upon the industrial statesmanship of the day is to prevent human waste. The dead weight of orphanage and the depleted craftsmanship, of crippled workers and workers suffering from trade diseases, of household depletion due to industrial conditions are, like our depleted soils, our gashed mountain sides and flooded river bottoms, so many strains upon the national structure, draining the reserve strength of all industries, and showing beyond all peradventure the public element and public concern in industrial health.

He proposed several specific methods for preserving and improving "our human resources, and therefore our labor power." Wage scales and other labor data should be made public; all deaths, injuries, and diseases due to industrial operation should be reported to the authorities; wage commissions should be established in the Nation and State to determine the minimum wage scale in different industries; the Federal government should investigate all industries with a view to establishing standards of sanitation and safety; there should be nine and factory inspection according to standards fixed by inter-State agreement; a Federal employers' liability and National and State legislation should establish standards of compensation for industrial accidents and for occupational diseases clearly due to industrial conditions. For the adoption by law of a fair standard of compensation for accidents resulting fatally while shall clearly fix the minimum compensation in all cases, the monetary equivalent of a living wage varies according to local conditions, but should be sufficiently high to make morality possible and to provide for education, recreation, proper care of the children, maintenance during sickness, and reasonable saving for old age; excessive hours of labor should be prohibited for all wage-workers and night labor of women and children should be forbidden; one day of rest in seven should be provided by law; continuous twenty-four-hour labor should be divided into three shifts of eight hours by law; the employment of women should be entirely prohibited, and labor by children should be subject to governmental and compensation for all industries employing women and children should be specially safeguarded by governmental supervision and regulation; insurance funds against sickness, accident, invalidism, and old age should be established by a charge either in whole or in part upon the industries.

The suffrage should be granted to women, if for no other reason, to enable workingwomen to combine for their own protection by the use of the ballot.

As a people we cannot afford to let any group of citizens or any individual citizen labor under conditions which are injurious to the common welfare. Industry, therefore, must submit to such public regulation as will make it a means of life and health, not of death or inefficiency.

The Farmer.

The Country Life Commission should be revived with greatly increased power; its abandonment was a severe blow to our people. The welfare of the farmer is a basic need of this Nation. The country school should be brought in touch with country life. For this reason the Progressives approve of Government co-operation with the farmer to make the farm more productive. Co-operative associations of farmers both for the production and the selling of agricultural products should be encouraged. So long as the farmer leaves co-operative activities with their profit-shaping to the city man of business, so long will the foundations of wealth be undermined and the comforts of enlightenment be impossible in the country communities.

The Tariff.

On the tariff he says: "I believe in a protective tariff, but I believe in it as a principle approached from a standpoint of the interests of the whole people, and not as a bundle of preferences to be given favorite individuals." He believes the American people favor the principle of a protective tariff, but are in rebellion against the wrong-doing and unjust application of that policy and the abuses in past legislation.

"It is not merely the tariff that should be revised, but the method of tariff-making and of tariff administration."

"The first steps should be the creation of a permanent commission of nonpartisan experts" of "ample powers" to secure "exact and reliable information." "The present Tariff Board is entirely inadequate in point of powers reposed in it and scope of work undertaken."

The Tariff Commission in Germany affords a splendid model. This commission must scientifically determine "the difference in the cost of production here and abroad. The effect on "prices to the consumer," is sure full justice to the pay envelope of the wage-earner. The commission must not attempt to encroach on the tariff making power of Congress. It shall report with full publicity and promptly. The tariff shall be revised schedule by schedule to avoid the "staggering blows to business" incident to former general revision. The effect will be to wipe out the "logrolling and vote-trading" incited by special interests in the past. Only in this means can the tariff be taken out of politics."

"The substitution of a tariff for revenue only as proposed by the Democratic platform would plunge this country into the most widespread industrial depression we have ever seen."

The revision shall be downward and not upward and involve a square deal not merely to the manufacturer, but to the wage-worker and to the general consumer.

High Cost of Living.

"The cost of living," says Mr. Roosevelt, "has risen during the last few years

Automatic Bargain Basement

Over In Germany

these Children's Silk Stockings were manufactured. Then they were sent to America to be sold by the importer to some jobber or some retailer and then to be retailed at about 35c.

But something happened. Else they would never have come to the Automatic Bargain Basement. They were a surplus—left after the bulk had been sold—and consequently they came here to be retailed at about 35c.

If they don't sell at 15c the price goes still lower as follows:

TODAY'S EXAMPLE:

Some of these Children's Stockings went on sale August 2nd—if they do not sell quickly at 15c

On August 16th—they will be Automatically Reduced to 11c.

On August 23rd—they will be reduced to 7c.

On August 30th—they will be reduced to 3c.

On Sept. 8th—they will be given away.

WHAT'S TRUE OF THIS LOT IS TRUE OF ALL AUTOMATIC BARGAIN BASEMENT LOTS—THEY MUST, FOR SOME REASON, BE AT A BARGAIN PRICE.

UNITES COUPLE WED 24 YEARS

Judge F. Leroy Sweetser in the Malden District Court today reconciled a couple that had separated after being twenty-four years married.

The clerk called the case of Mrs. Annie Gearon vs. John Gearon. Gearon, charged with non-support, walked to the front of the court room. His wife followed. Three of their six children followed.

When the testimony was all in Judge Sweetser leaned over the bench.

"Now, let's all be friendly together," he began.

"Now," continued the judge, turning first to Gearon and then to the wife, "really, aren't both of you willing to make up and live happily together again? You know you must both put up with one another's peculiarities. You have lived together for twenty-four years and have six children and it is your duty to think about them first.

"You are old enough to know the trials of a home life. Little disagreements should not be allowed to separate you after so long a married life. There are more times ahead that are easy, and then everything should be smooth and peaceful again.

"Now, are you both willing to go back to live together and try to get along?"

"We are," husband and wife said together.

"Will you clasp your hands," the court asked, "as a token that you will agree and be happy?"

"Yes, we will," answered both together, happily. They clasped hands, then walked out with their children.

DELMONICO PRICES AND SMALL PORTIONS HIT SENATE DINERS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—On the ground floor of the Senate wing of the Capitol is a restaurant. There are times when charges for some items on the bill of fare rise to a difficult pitch for Senate restaurants in New York.

There each notes on the faces of "regulars" when they spied this item: "sweet corn, 25 cents." They ordered corn and beheld with considerable surprise the serving of one lonely ear of very ordinary dimensions.

Next to the tempting novelties introduced on the bill was "new potatoes, 20 cents." They grew the color and the record unanimously returned in due time, and ere before had a small bowl containing six potatoes.

The restaurant is owned by the Senate, and is conducted by a manager. It loses money.

Engaged? Miss Sears Laughs Vanderbilt Mother's Guest

ELEONORA SEARS AND HAROLD VANDERBILT.

MISS ELEONORA SEARS

HAROLD VANDERBILT

Heiress Simply Smiles at Questions on Her Reported Betrothal —Talk of Newport Visit.

Does a laugh mean yes or no, or neither? Anyway, a rippling laugh was the only reply Eleonora Sears made to a query as to her reported engagement to Harold S. Vanderbilt, who is a guest at the Sears Summer place at Beverly Farms.

Miss Sears is just back from a trip to Newport, where she and Mr. Vanderbilt were so much in company that the story of their engagement was revived. She returned by motor with Mr. Vanderbilt and drove his biggest pooling car from Newport to Beverly.

"I've been enjoying the dandiest of times at Newport," said she. "The weather there has been ideal for the past several weeks, and with the tennis tournament in progress, yachting, golf and the other outdoor attractions in full sway any one who cares for that sort of thing can be kept very busy.

"Oh, yes, I came near forgetting about that ball game we played Sunday. It was more fun than all the other things together.

"Oh, no. It was not my first experience in that branch of sport," Miss Sears replied to the questioning of the reporter. "I learned to throw correctly while I was a very little tot and never have lost the art, I can but, too. The one department of the game in which I do not consider myself an adept is fielding, and I think this is chiefly due to lack of practice."

While in Newport Miss Sears was the guest of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont at Marble House, the latter's Summer home. She was the guest of Harold Vanderbilt on several yachting parties and almost constantly was to be seen in his company on the tennis courts, golf links or other places of recreation. Newport is firm in its belief that the two are engaged, and North Shore circles are more than half convinced that such a relationship exists. Miss Sears simply smiles.

RENEW BILLER POISON PROBE

WORCESTER, Aug. 6.—Following the official announcement of the finding of cyanide of potassium in the stomach of Mrs. Emma Biller, whose sudden death on Thursday at her home, No. 14 Walnut avenue, is surrounded by mystery, the police redoubled their efforts today to learn all the circumstances in the case.

Elizabeth, the daughter of the dead woman, and Max Biller, the husband, were summoned to the police station and questioned. The daughter told a different story than that she told at first. She said that her uncle, Emil Biller, was in the house at the time her mother died, and was with her when she found her mother dead. And after that she had said that her uncle did not enter the house, but remained at the door, talking to her mother.

Medical Examiner Ernest L. Hunt was not surprised by the report of Professor Alfred Balch of Tufts that he had found traces of cyanide. The dregs from the coffee cup from which the woman had been drinking are now being analyzed.

Mrs. Biller was the wife of Max Biller, a foreman carpenter, in comfortable circumstances.

Last Thursday a physician was summoned and found Mrs. Biller in a dying condition, lying partially clothed on her bed. The daughter said her mother had suddenly become ill while drinking some coffee. Further investigation revealed such suspicious circumstances that the doctor sent for the police.

The chief of police learned Max sent to Germany for his younger brother, Emil, and had been a father to him. Emil came and brought his wife to live in Worcester at No. 1061 Pleasant street. A few weeks ago Mrs. Emil Biller sold her furniture, took her child and said she was going to relatives in Philadelphia. Max became estranged from his brother, it is said.

Professor Balch, who examined the stomach, said:

"I am the authority for the statement given out by Medical Examiner Hunt saying that cyanide of potassium was found in the abdomen of Mrs. Biller. I have not yet completed my examination, so I cannot talk about the matter. I will file my report with Medical Examiner Hunt within a few days."

SIGHTS DAY OF CLEAN STREETS

By SYBIL WARNE.

Boston children are learning to keep clean the alleyways of their city.

Mothers are being taught to correct their careless children, who litter streets with waste.

Junior leagues are being formed all over the city, where boys and girls get together and talk over clean streets.

It is the adults that keep dirty the Boston streets in some sections, more than the children.

These conclusions Miss Mabel Frost, an inspector of alleys and streets, employed by the Women's Municipal League, has reached after two years' experience in her present position. The teaching boys and girls to get interested in clean back yards as well as front ones and alleyways, has been slow, but yet has wonderfully progressed in this city, so that today through the help of many boys and girls great improvements are seen.

Miss Frost is constantly talking to mothers about instructing the children to keep the back and front yards free from rubbish. Her preachment has been made interesting to thousands of children by stereopticon views.

According to Miss Frost, Boston will soon be clean in many sections where filth and dirt have hitherto reigned. She does not believe so much in enforcing the law about clean streets as in teaching the young its importance.

"Too much so can the interest of the children in picking up waste paper and rubbish in the alley. The way they are responding is simply fine," said Miss Frost.

"When I first took hold of this work, about two years ago, it was hard to make much headway, as many of the boys and girls were not very much interested in my work, but now hundreds are active workers. Often I go and have a chat with the mothers. Get the support of the mothers in this way and it ends in getting that of the children.

"While it is an offence to throw paper and rubbish around, it is much better to educate the child to look after the streets and alleyways than to try to prosecute. Tell them these dirty streets and alleyways belong to them, as their fathers are in most cases tax payers.

"We have formed junior leagues at which these matters are constantly discussed by the children. You would be amused to hear the compositions of many children on this subject.

"One little girl in her composition said 'You would not think of keeping the front Seat.'

NEW CO-OPERATIVE KOSHER SHOP OPENED

A co-operative store for the sale of kosher meat was opened at No. 64 Poplar street, West End, today, and another will be opened at No. 249 Chambers street tomorrow. Several hundred butchers from all sections of Greater Boston met at No. 2 North Russell street to consider the situation. It was suggested that the Mothers' Protective Association take over the butchers' shops and employ the proprietors as cutters in the co-operative shops.

Reductions of price to propitiate the boycotters were talked of.

Daffy Birds.

By MORTON BIRGE.

To a corner dim and remarked to him: "Now, say not a word—but hark!
There's just one thing that I can't find out, and I really have got to know.
Will you please tell me—for I cannot see—what it is makes the PLAMINGO?"

Then the Peacock white looked the Crested Crane very straight in the eye, did he,
And he said: "I fear you have brought me here to spring a bird joke on me."
Then the Peacock white ran away with speed, but he added, before he ran:
"I can't quite say what it is today—but maybe the PELICAN."

$46,183 ESTATE LEFT BY DAVID GRAHAM PHILLIPS

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—The appraisers' report of the estate of David Graham Phillips, the novelist, who was killed by an erratic musician in January, 1911 fixes its value at $46,183. It consists almost entirely of royalty rights in numerous novels, articles and short stories. Mrs. Carolyn Prevert, sister of the novelist, is the sole beneficiary.

The report of the appraiser showed that at the time of the author's death he had $298 in the bank, and wearing apparel valued at $96. All the rest of the estate was made up of royalties. The present appraisement of the author's various novels ranges from $12,544 for the "Grain of Dust," to $13.62 for the "Light Fingered Gentry."

GRANGE ENTERTAINS NATIONAL MASTER

Grangers from all parts of Middlesex County attended a reception given by Waltham Grange, P. of H., to National Master Oliver Wilson of Illinois and State Master Charles M. Gardner of Westfield, in Odd Fellows Hall, Waltham. The reception was in charge of Master Charles J. H. Cahill of Waltham Grange. Miss Clara Wentworth, Mrs. Sidney Simmons and Edward E. Cutler sang.

FISHERMEN TO USE STEVENSON'S BOAT

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 6.—The schooner Casco, immortal as the ship of adventure in which, twenty-four years ago, Robert Louis Stevenson sailed away, never to return, soon will be remodeled to enter the fishing business. Cruising through Nevents on the Casco, in search of health, he gathered the material for the "Ebb Tide," "The Wrecker" and "In the South Seas."

SUIT AGAIN PUT OFF FOR MRS. VANDERBILT

NEWPORT, Aug. 6.—The suit of C. Leroy Grinnell against Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt was called in the District Court here today for the third time, and was again postponed one week. Mortimer A. Sullivan, counsel for Grinnell, declared that there had been enough postponements and that Mrs. Vanderbilt must either fight the case or take some other action. Grinnell is suing for $500, claiming that Mrs. Vanderbilt engaged him to tutor her son Willie, but that he was never called to perform the services.

Belasco to Stage Play for Judge to Refute a "Steal"

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—"Tainted Philanthropy" is to be produced for the Federal Court by David Belasco. By giving a performance of the play Belasco believes he will prove to Judge Holt and everyone else that "Tainted Philanthropy," which Abraham Goldmopf confesses he wrote, bears no resemblance whatever to "The Woman" by William C. DeMille, which Belasco produced.

"The Woman" was a success and Mr. Goldmopf claimed it. He had submitted "Tainted Philanthropy" to the Belasco play-reading department and subsequently was struck by the similarity of his unproduced play and the Belasco-De Mille success. He brought suit to restrain Belasco and De Mille from giving further performances.

Commissioner Gilchrist was hearing testimony when Mr. Belasco became excited.

"The plays are as much alike as 'Hamlet' and 'Bertha the Sewing Machine Girl,'" shouted the dramatist, shaking his white locks.

The suggestion of Belasco that both plays be produced for the benefit of the judge, Belasco paying the expense of the production, was received as a substitute for the submission of the manuscript of both to the court. Judge Holt agreed to it and Belasco said he would do them both in October.

Some Beauty Helps You Should Know
The woman who prizes her hair shampoos it frequently in summer months with canthrox and in this way keeps it clean, bright and fluffy. A teaspoonful of canthrox dissolved in a cup of hot water is ample for a good shampoo, and after canthrox has been used, the scalp and hair are immaculately clean, while the hair dries quickly and evenly. Canthrox is especially fine to restore the color and fluff to faded, "stringy" hair, and overcomes that "matty" look so common in hot weather.
Many complexion-upsets would never happen if women discarded coarse, smothering creams and used a plain lotion, made by putting 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine into ½ pint witch hazel (or hot water), then adding 4 ounces pyrmus. This lotion is invisible when on—protects the skin from tan and freckles, banishes the oily, shiny condition, and other unnatural impurities, and keeps it smooth, velvety and youthful-looking.

URGES LAYING BARE THE RUSSELL FAMILY SECRETS IN OPEN COURT

WILLIAM C. RUSSELL TESTIFIES HE NEVER SPEAKS TO FRESNO DAN AT MEALTIMES.

By CLEMENT L. POLLOCK.

When the stalwart ranchman came to Boston from Dakota and asserted that William C. Russell was his brother he asserted that there was a secret in the Russell family that he did not care to tell the lawyers. And he didn't tell the lawyers.

This is in line with the suggestion that I made yesterday with a view of getting at the truth of this amazing conflict. If the elder brother will think carefully enough he must be able to bring to his mind something that only he and his real brother knows. With that he could test the two Dans.

Why not do it in court? Tale is an extraordinary case and calls for extraordinary measures. If there is a family secret —a family skeleton, even—the Silent Man in gray knows it. So does his brother.

This case should be settled right and the imposter should be placed behind prison bars. If Fresno Dan is a fraud then the greatest injury that could be done to the gentle, silvery-bearded scion of the Russell house, has been done—thrusting upon him a stranger, in whose veins there is not a drop of blended blood, as a brother.

The young Japanese girl at the trial today is Miss Jeannine Thirnothee. She was born on Jamaica Island. Her mother is French; her father a native of Japan. She lives in Melrose. This is her first day in court. She knows William C. Russell.

William C. Russell and his real brother are not the only ones that demand justice in this case—the public demands it. There is one too many Dantels in it. What is needed is a Daniel of the calibre of the Daniel of the ancient days of Belshazzar. He would pick out the right Dan and read the handwriting on the wall for the spurious one.

Ferdinand B. Amy, an executor of the Russell estate, and a cousin of the Russell boys, resumed the stand when the case started today. Mr. Nason of the Russell estate force of lawyers questioned him.

To Adjourn Next Friday.

The lawyers and Master Pearey got together on the vacation question before the hearing started. It was decided to adjourn next Friday until September 4. The rest of this week there will be two sessions, from 10 until 1 and from 2 until 4 p. m.

"It is pretty hard to put anything over on Fresno Dan," one of the reporters said to me today. "Dakota Dan has been employed the last of the week in a Lynn theatre. Fresno Dan came across today with an offer of ten weeks at a good salary. I asked him the name of the company and he said, 'I don't remember.'"

Dakota Dan was absent when the proceedings began today. The strain of his testing to testimony day after day against him has told on his nerves. He is anxious to go on the stand himself and tell probably for the fifth time his story. Testimony was begun and interrupted. Mr. Amy took the stand this morning.

"Mr. Scharton asked you if you had received any data as to the birth, etc., of the claimant, and you said you received a letter from his sister," began Mr. Nason. "I ask you if this is the letter."

"It is," said Amy.

The letter was marked as an exhibit. Mr. Nason offered the letter in evidence. Mr. McNally, in the absence of Mr. Scharton, objected to the admission of the letter.

One of the women at the trial today reported this: "Fresno Dan has yawned sixty-eight times by actual count up to this time (noon). This thing seems to bore him."

"I don't think it is material at this time," said Master Peavey.

Mr. Nason wanted the letter admitted as an explanation of why Almy and others of the Russell estate employed detectives in the case. The name of the writer of the letter was not disclosed.

Cross-examined by Mr. McNally.

"You were satisfied at the first interview that Dakota Dan was not Daniel Blake Russell?"

"I was."

"And at the first interview with Fresno Dan that he was the genuine heir?"

DOESN'T LOOK LIKE A YANKEE.

An aged man and woman sat in one of the little cafes near the court house. She said: "That Dakota Dan man doesn't look like a member of a New England family. He's not the heir."

"No," replied the man, "he's an impostor."

And so it goes, each conflicting contingent growing stronger and stronger in their convictions.

"I was."

Almy testified that he did not think it strange that he recognized Fresno Dan so readily.

"Did you tell a reporter named Thompson that Fresno Dan was a fake?"

"I object," shouted Nason so sharply that it made people in the audience almost jump from their seats.

"You may answer," said Master Pevey.

"I did not," replied Almy.

"When you first heard a claimant was coming you thought he was a crank?"

"Yes."

CHIP OFF THE OLD BLOCK.

He is eighty years old, but hale and hearty. He is interested in the outcome of the Russell fight. He is Mr. Pearson, formerly a boot and shoe dealer in Temple place, Boston. The late Daniel Russell was a warm friend of his.

"Dakota Dan," he said, "bears a strong resemblance to my old friend, Daniel Russell of Melrose."

"Your opinion has not changed any since you first heard of him when you thought he was a crank?"

"Not in the least."

Asked for Photograph.

Almy asked when he first heard of a claimant that his photograph be sent to him so that he could put it with the "others."

"You had no other photograph had you?" asked Mr. McNally.

"No."

"What did you mean then by 'others'?"

"I meant that we were liable to have others and then we would put the photographs with them."

Almy testified that Daniel Blake Russell had small boxes in 1880 or 1881 and that he could not grow into the proud stature Dakota Dan is a "thousand years."

"Did you make a careful examination of Daniel Blake Russell when you saw him thirty years ago?"

"No."

"Why couldn't he have grown into the size of the claimant?"

SUITS LONG-HAND REPORTERS.

The young man who is taking the Russell hearing testimony in shorthand made the queerest kick today (privately) on record. This was his plaint:

"It is mighty hard to take Nason—he talks so slow that I have to wait for his words."

He has no complaint of that character against Scharton.

He was a slim, delicate boy then.

Amy said that when he saw Dakota Dan he knew he was not the right heir because among other things he did not stammer.

"If he had stammered," asked Mr. McNally, "would you have thought he was Daniel Blake Russell?"

"I might have."

Were you at the Melrose station when Fresno Dan first went there?"

"I don't think I was."

"Weren't you there with some detectives and didn't you say when Fresno Dan got off and started in the wrong direction 'Look where that fool is going'?"

"That did not occur."

Before Almy replied several women clapped their hands. One woman in a light blue dress and wearing a white flowered hat was particularly demonstrative.

"If that lady in the front is not less demonstrative," said Mr. Pevey, "she must leave the courtroom."

McNally inquired about the lights in Berry & Upton's office the night Dakota Dan was asked to identify James Axker and Kate Burnett, old Russell employes.

"Didn't Dakota Dan ask that more light be turned on in the office?" asked Mr. McNally.

"He did not," replied Amy.

Making Eyes at Fresno Dan.

Didn't he ask Kate Murlock to remove her glasses so that he could see her better?

There was no such conversation.

Fresno Dan at one time today got up and left the courtroom. It was reported that one of the pretty girls in the room was making eyes at him, and he could not stand that sort of an attack. He returned in a few minutes and turned his face in an opposite direction.

William C. Russell was called to the stand at 11:30. Mr. Russell said he was on good terms with his brother when he left and is now on brotherly terms with Fresno Dan.

"Do you and Fresno Dan eat at the same table?" Mr. Russell was asked.

"Yes, when he is there, but he comes home at all hours."

"Does he stay out late at night?"

"Not very."

"Has he come with you more than ten times?"

"Yes, more than that."

"Where do you take your meals at home?"

"In the dining room."

"Does Dan eat in the dining room?"

"When he eats with me he does."

"Do you and Fresno Dan talk to each other?"

"No."

"Nor of your boyhood days?"

"We do not."

Silent at Meals.

"Why don't you talk to each other?"

"Well, I don't want it said that I instructed Fresno Dan and then for another reason I don't talk much anyhow."

"Have you and Fresno Dan talked much?"

"Very little."

"Do you say 'Good morning, Dan?'"

"No."

"Do you say 'Good night, Dan?'"

"No."

"Do you ask as to his health?"

"No."

William C. Russell testified that he did not talk with his brother any more when they were boys than he talks with Fresno Dan now.

"What did you testify the color of your brother's eyes were?"

"Brown or hazel."

"Bertha York testified to that, too, didn't she?"

"Yes."

"What was the color of your mother's eyes?"

"Brown or hazel."

"Did you hear Fresno Dan testify that he did not know the color of his mother's eyes?"

"I don't think I was here."

"Yes."

William C. Russell said that Dan was his mother's favorite and that Bertha's favorite was his mother. He thought that Fresno Dan's memory of his mother's eyes might have failed in twenty-five years.

Bertha York had a good chance to study Daniel Blake Russell's eyes?

"Now here."

William C. Russell said that he and his brother Daniel talked to the primary school on the first day and might have walked with him after that, but they did not offer to.

An interesting spectator yesterday was Young Japanese girl, Miss Jeannine Thirnothee. She lives in Melrose and knows William C. Russell. Also, she has read the newspapers and knows the case from A to Z.

Miss Thirnothee was born on Jamaica Island. Her mother is French; her father was a native of Japan. "I have read a great deal about the Russell will case," she said. "I think it is intensely interesting. How odd it is to have two men claim to be one."

Mrs. Champ Clark Enlists Notables in "Servants' Club"

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Mrs. Champ Clark, wife of the Speaker, with characteristic originality, is organizing servants' clubs to be composed of leading official, social, literary and artistic people. It has for its motto "Ich dien" (I serve). Its chief purpose is to help people in unfortunate circumstances and to alleviate misery.

Mrs. Clark has already enlisted such notables as Thomas Nelson Page, Andrew Carnegie, Mr. and Mrs. Seth Low, Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Mrs. John R. Henderson, Wayne MacVeagh, Mrs. Thomas A. Edison, Mrs. R. R. Hitt and Miss Katherine C. Dabney, founder of the Woman's National Democratic League.

Miss Frances Stockwell of New York is associated with her in the work. Mrs. Clark selected the title because she believes first that all public officials and their wives are servants of the people. The chief requirement for membership is not to be ashamed to bear the old Anglo-Saxon title of "servant."

"HELP ME FIND MY BOY," PLEADS HEART BROKEN MOTHER

"I want the mothers of Cambridge to help me find my boy. I want the Mayor to help me. I fear that my boy's body is in Gendreau Pit, in the rear of my house. He isn't kidnaped. He is drowned. I want to recover his poor little body.—Mrs. Mary D'Arcy, mother of missing seven-year-old Richard D'Arcy.

MOTHER APPEALS FOR LOST BOY

pool. I know it. They wouldn't allow them to dump rubbish there today or until they could find his body. If I can only get his body again I will be partly reconciled.

"Richard isn't kidnapped. He's drowned, and they must find his body for me. The pool is a curse. Already three boys have lost their lives in it, and now I know it has claimed my boy Richard."

Here Mrs. D'Arcy gave way to her grief. She could speak no longer. She threw her apron over her head and ran into the house sobbing.

The neighbors are indignant. They declare that a fence should be built around the pond to keep people from falling in. It is impossible to tell where the bank is. And then it slopes down abruptly to a depth of more than thirty feet. They declare that it is time for it to stop and call on the authorities to do something.

Drag Other Pits.

While the mother was searching the woods, which extend for miles, the police started dragging the remainder of the deep and treacherous clay pits which abound near the house. Directly in the rear of the D'Arcy house is Gendreau pit, the last spent and most treacherous of all. So calling to it that it has been said to have no bottom.

Little Fred, the twelve-year-old brother of Richard, who is the last survivor of triplets, went out back of the house today to show an AMERICAN reporter how deep it is. Picking up a stone he threw it out on to the surface of the pond, which, covered with a thick scum, resembles a dump. The stone struck with a dull thud, then a few bubbles came up to show that it sank. Fred believes his brother went out, stepped on the treacherous surface, and was drowned there.

All the pits near will be dragged today. They are: Jackson, Bay State, Sands and Gendreau pits, besides Artificial Pond and Fresh Pond, with their tributaries. Policemen from Station 1 have been detailed for this purpose.

A new clew, that the boy might possibly be alive, was investigated by the police, following a report made early today. This was that a boy answering the description of the missing lad was seen riding on a milk wagon through Belmont early Sunday morning.

The story came from Policeman McNamee, night patrolman of Belmont. He said he thought it strange at that time that a small boy should be out riding at such an early hour, and later, when he heard that the D'Arcy boy was missing, he coupled the facts and decided to report to the Cambridge police.

Mother Heartbroken.

The story agrees to a certain extent with that told by John Cionin, ten years old, of Lakeview avenue, who said he saw a boy answering the description of the missing Richard walking along Huron avenue in the vicinity of Belmont with a poorly clad man about seven o'clock saturday evening.

Mrs. Mary D'Arcy refuses to believe her son was kidnaped.

"I don't know a soul in the world that would want to take my boy away from me," she said, "except that he was a very attractive little fellow, and people sometimes say street singers and gypsies steal such little boys."

GIRL SWIMMERS READY TO RACE

Entries for the AMERICAN'S second great annual swimming carnival on the Charles River basin next Saturday afternoon are still pouring in.

Already the Swimming Editor has received applications from thirty-eight young women who will try for first honors in the race. The entry list does not close until next Thursday and if the enthusiasm of the girls already entered is any criterion there will be more than fifty starters. Last year there were twenty-five. Practically all of the girls who participated in the carnival last year are entered for the race on Saturday.

The course is the same as that of last year, namely, from the Metropolitan Park Commission's float, opposite the Union Boat clubhouse on the Boston esplanade, upstream to the stake boat, which will bear the letter "S," turn the stake boat, leaving it to the left, and return down stream to the starting point. The distance is one and one-half miles and 200 feet.

This year the Swimming Editor has left nothing undone in his elaborate preparations to make the event one of the most successful in the history of the great basin.

The race will start at 2:30, but the race is not the only treat in store for the thousands who will line the esplanade. An elaborate aquatic entertainment, put on by amateur and professional swimming girls, will be given from three rafts. All sorts of aquatic stunts will be given. Girls from every section of Boston have entered, but they will have rivals from Cambridge, Somerville, Brookline and other cities and towns.

One girl who entered today is Elsie Lidh, of No. 13 Emerald street, Boston. She was a contestant last year and put up a creditable race. She promises to do better next Saturday. Then there is Mary Cotter, of No. 271 Boylston street, Brookline. This young lady will be encouraged by a big crowd from Brookline.

Three other entries for the big race are Julia Hurley of Neponset and Gertrude Gibson and Mollie Rauschal of Dorchester.

One of the most important announcements made by the Swimming Editor and one which caused much favorable comment was the personnel of the officials. Men widely known in aquatics have agreed to be on hand to handle the affair. The medical staff consists of Dr. George P. Keenan of No. 85 Newbury street, Dr. W. Randolph Angell, No. 715 Washington street, and Dr. Nicholas A. Gallagher of Malden.

One of the main features of the afternoon aside from the race, will be the diving stunts of Miss Winnie Conley. She was fourth in last year's race, but did not care to enter this year. Mary Burke and Madeline Berlo of Puttee's Diving Girls, are also on the bill. They do not need an introduction to Boston.

Each contestant will be mailed a certificate of entry. She must present this certificate to the clerk of the course not later than 2 o'clock, or one-half hour before the race. The clerk of the course will be found at the entrance of the contestants' dressing tent which the Metropolitan Park Police will provide on the esplanade. The clerk will give each contestant a brass swimming check, entitling her to enter the dressing tent. There she will change to her swimming rig and then report to the starter.

LOWER DEATH RATE OF BOSTON BABIES MAY END IN RECORD

The officials of the Board of Health are optimistic on the outlook for a record-breaking low death rate in Boston this year of children under one year. In 1911 the rate was 125 to every 1,000 births. This year, according to the figures at hand for the first seven months, the rate per 100 births seems likely to be as low as 103.

The death rate for all causes, unless an epidemic sets in, will not be greater than twelve. The death rate last week of Boston residents was 13.54, and the week before a little more than twelve.

The commissioners hope to make Boston the healthiest city in the country before another year ends.

Isn't that easy? It would be a shame to let that easy money get by you.

COUPON PARTIES ENJOY REVERE

Sunday AMERICAN coupon crowds took in the ten best shows at Revere Beach yesterday. They were seen everywhere on the beach.

At the Old Mill, hundreds enjoyed the boat ride. The Daffy House coupons attracted young and old, and nothing was more popular than a ride on the Rough Riders and a spin in the air ship.

Partee's Diving Girls continue to be a strong drawing card with every one. "Al" Wheeler, Da Dive, Marie Burke, Murray Sisters, Mary O'Loughlin and others also displayed marvelous skill. Rides on the Miniature Railway also attracted throngs.

Marvelle, the contortionist, is making a hit at the Scenic Temple. Moving pictures and vaudeville are weekly attractions here. Moving pictures and songs by Fred Waters and Miss Shannon are the attractions at the Theatre Comique.

At the Dream Theatre the Battle of Gettysburg fills the large auditorium every time. Other crowds are witnessing the most realistic panorama of modern times, "The Sinking of the Titanic."

Take a ride on the Miniature Railway near the Bath House Station next Saturday. This ride is given free to all holders of AMERICAN coupons.

Look for next Sunday's AMERICAN coupons. There will be eleven of them and more will follow.

HAY FEVER ATTACKS QUICKLY ENDED DON'T RUN AWAY FROM THIS DISEASE

Are you half sick for two or three months every summer with Hay Fever—violent sneezing spells, running at the nose, intense itching in the corners of the eyes, pain and soreness in the back of the throat, at nights a stuffed-up feeling in the head and an asthmatic wheezing in the throat and chest? If so, you can get almost instant relief by simply using a cleansing, healing antiseptic Cream called Ely's Cream Balm.

Hay Fever is due to an extremely sensitive condition of the membrane lining the nose and throat. Dust, smoke and certain odors irritate this delicate inside skin, it becomes inflamed, causing a watery discharge from the nose and violent spasms of sneezing.

Ely's Cream Balm will relieve all these distressing symptoms in five minutes' time. It opens up the air passages, soothes, heals and strengthens the weakened, inflamed membrane, makes them in healthy, normal condition, so that you are not subject to Hay Fever attacks.

Get a fifty cent bottle from your druggist today. Give it a fair trial, and get your money back if you are not satisfied.

Hope of the People Lies in New Progressive Organization, Declares Colonel.

out of all proportion to the increase of most salaries and wages." What is first necessary is "fearless, intelligent, and searching into the whole subject, made absolutely by a non-partisan body of experts with no prejudice to warp their minds, no private object to serve, and shall recommend any necessary remedy heedless of what interest may be hurt thereby, and caring only for the interests of the people as a whole." The Republicans promise such an inquiry, but their rank dishonesty of action and the Chicago Convention "makes their every promise worthless." It is nonsense to turn to the Democratic party for relief, because, first, the Democratic party "affects to find the entire high cost of living in the tariff," ignoring the patent fact that the problem is world-wide, equally pressing on free-trade England and in highly protected Germany. Moreover, if the Democrats are sincere, they must take all duties off the products of the farmer, and we "certainly cannot afford to have the farmer struck down." Various elements, economic, political, and social, are pointed out by Mr. Roosevelt as contributing to the high cost of living. But effective legislation regarding it can only be framed on a comprehensive, rather than a thorough, scientific, and prompt inquiry.

The Currency.

Mr. Roosevelt declares that our present bank currency based on Government bonds is unscientific, and urges the adoption of a system which shall provide "elasticity in the credit and currency necessary for the control of business in times of recurring panics." The control of such a system should be in the hands of the Government, and not free from "manipulation by Wall Street or the large interests."

Conservation.

Under this head Mr. Roosevelt reaffirms his well-known policy on the conservation and reclamation of National resources. We must conserve our soil, our forests, our mines, not only for our own benefit but for the benefit of our children and descendants. "The public should not alienate its fee in the water-power which will be of incalculable value as a source of power in the immediate future," and "we should undertake the complete development and control of the Mississippi as a National work, just as we have undertaken the work of building the Panama Canal."

Alaska.

In Alaska the government has an opportunity of starting in what is almost a fresh field, to work out various problems by actual experiment. It should at once construct, own and operate all the railways in Alaska; it should keep the fee of all coal fields and allow them to be operated by lessee with the condition in the lease that non-use shall operate as a forfeit; a system of land taxation should be tried which promotes the actual use of land and discourages the holding of land for speculation; the telegraph lines should be owned and operated by the government.

International Affairs.

In international affairs this country should behave towards other nations exactly as an honorable private citizen behaves towards other private citizens. Our small army should have large efficiency; the navy must be readily built up until it proves possible to secure by international agreement a general reduction of armaments.

The Panama Canal tolls on deep-water commerce should be uniform to all nations, including ourselves: American coastwise vessels should pass through the Canal free, for this would be no discrimination against foreign nations and would give us reasonable competition with transcontinental railways.

No foreign treaty should be entered into which we do not mean scrupulously to observe in every particular.

Conclusion.

In summing up the specific policies expounded in his address Mr. Roosevelt spoke as follows:

No, friends, this is my confession of faith. I have made it rather long because I wish you to know just what my deepest convictions are on the great questions of today, so that if you choose to make me your standard bearer in the fight, you shall make your choice understanding exactly how I feel—and if, after hearing me, you think you ought to choose some one else, I shall loyally abide by your choice. The convictions to which I have come have not been arrived at as the result of study in the closet or the library, but from the knowledge I have gained through hard experience during the many years in which, under many and varied conditions, I have striven and toiled with men.

I believe in a larger use of the governmental power to help remedy industrial wrongs, because it has been borne in on me by actual experience that without the exercise of such power many of the wrongs will go unremedied. I believe in a larger opportunity for the people themselves directly to participate in government and to control their governmental agents, because long experience has taught me that without such control many of their agents will represent them badly.

Appeal to the People.

By actual experience in office I have found that, as a rule, I could secure the triumph of the causes in which I most believed not from the politicians and the men who clung to exceptional right to speak in business and government, but by going over their heads and appealing directly to the people themselves. I am not under the slightest delusion as to any power that during my political career I have at any time possessed. Whatever of power I at any time had, I obtained from the people. I could exercise it only so long as, and to the extent that, the people not merely believed in me, but heartily backed me up.

Whatever I did as President I was able to do only because I had the backing of the people. When on any point I did not have that backing when on any point I differed from the people, it mattered not whether I was right or whether I was wrong, my power vanished. I tried my best to lead the people, to arouse them, to tell them what I thought was right; if necessary, I never hesitated to tell them what I thought they ought to hear, even though it would be unpleasant for them to hear it; but I recognized that my task was to try to lead them and not to drive them, to take them into my confidence, to try to show them that I was right, and then loyally and in good faith accept their decision. I will do anything for the people except what my conscience tells me is wrong, and that I can do for no man and no set of men. I hold that a man cannot serve the people well unless he serves his conscience; but I hold also that where his conscience bids him refuse to do what the people desire, he should not try to continue in office against their will.

Our government system should be so shaped that the public servant, when he cannot conscientiously carry out the wishes of the people, shall at their desire leave his office and not misrepresent them in office; and I hold that the public servant can by so doing better than in any other way serve both them and his conscience.

Fight Worth Making.

Surely there never was a fight better worth making than the one in which we are engaged. In all the matters what befalls any one of us who for the time being stands in the forefront of the battle. I hope we shall win, and I believe that if we can wake the people to what the fight really means we shall win. But win or lose, we shall not falter. What were fate may at the moment overtake any of us, the movement itself will not stop. Our cause is based on the eternal principles of righteousness; and even though we who now lead may for the time fall, in the end the cause itself shall triumph. Six weeks ago, here in Chicago, I spoke to the honest representatives of a convention which was not dominated by honest men; a convention whereon set, alien to duty of men who, with sneering indifference to every principle of right, so acted as to bring to a shameful end a party which had been founded over half a century ago by men in whose souls burned the fire of lofty endeavor. Now to you men who, in your turn, have come together to

Platform Very Radical.

The platform that will be presented to the National Progressive convention tomorrow is the most radical ever drawn by a political party. The resolutions committee is completing the final draft of the measure today. The principal planks advocated are:

1—Regulation of working conditions by national and State commissions, minimum wages to be fixed, eight-hour day for employes in industries having a twenty-four-hour working day, restriction of employment of women and children, workingmen's insurance, improvement of home life through the establishment of living wages to workers.

2—Control of large combinations by the commission to prevent stock watering.

3—Recall of judicial decisions.

4—Indorsement of the initiative, referendum and the recall.

5—Equal franchise for women, direct election of Senators and the publication of campaign contributions.

6—Return to the Roosevelt Pinchot program of conservation.

7—Pensions for persons too old to work or disabled while employed.

8—Assessment of wealth for its police protection by a graduated tax on land.

9—A scientific, non-partisan tariff commission.

10—Solution of the high cost of living problem by an industrial commission.

11—Co-operation with the farmer to make his land more productive.

12—Currency reform.

Every candidate on the Progressive National and State tickets will take the stump. Mr. Roosevelt will speak in forty-four out of the forty-eight States. Nothing in the way of campaigning will be left undone. Headquarters will be opened at once both in Chicago and New York.

Johnson for Running Mate.

"Colonel Roosevelt can have anything he wants from the Progressive party, and therefore Governor Johnson of California will be nominated as his running mate. Governor Johnson is a fighting man, and with two fighting men at the head of the ticket the Progressive party will be able to wage the most aggressive campaign ever witnessed in American politics."

The Vice-Presidential situation was thus outlined today by one of the most prominent leaders of the new party. He added that at first Colonel Roosevelt had favored the nomination of a Southern Democrat, but after a long conference with his advisers had decided that it would be good politics to name the Vice-President from the West this year. Colonel John M. Parker from Louisiana and Lake E. Wright of Tennessee, both candidates, had been the men favored by the Colonel.

The decision that Governor Johnson was the best man was reached today after a long night conference. George L. Record son was notified that he had been decided upon. He stated that if he were needed he would accept.

Lindsey Disappointed.

A protest is expected from the California delegation, but the members will be told that it will not be necessary for the Governor to resign unless elected.

Friends of Judge Ben B. Lindsey were disappointed when they learned their candidate had been shelved, but declared their intention of supporting the ticket however made up.

Roosevelt is standing by his guns after a busy session of conferences. Discussions during which he endeavored to smooth over the differences that have arisen because of his stand on the negro question, and some of the planks which he demanded be inserted in the platform of the National Progressive party, took up much of Roosevelt's time.

At their conclusion he was in no very pleasant frame of mind, but let it be known he had told the dissenters that if the Progressives wanted him as their leader they must follow out his ideas.

He has given his final sanction to the more important planks of the platforms. It is now practically in shape for adoption Wednesday.

Unseat Both Florida Lists.

The contesting negro delegations from Florida and Mississippi instated by the provisional National Committee, took their cases before the newly appointed committee on credentials. There was a long and bitter fight and then the Credentials Committee finally voted to throw out both the white and negro contesting delegations from Florida.

The break with the negroes came early today after the committee on credentials had labored through the evening and the early hours of the morning. It came after Miss Jane Addams, suffragist, settlement worker and delegate at large from Illinois, had appeared before the committee on credentials and warned the members against any stand that involved race prejudice. This was the first time that a woman has ever appeared before the credentials committee of a national convention.

Julius P. Mitchell of Rhode Island and Dr. George L. Canon of New Jersey, both attacked the methods pursued in selecting the Florida white delegation. Finally they said they were willing to compromise to secure harmony.

By a vote of 38 to 4 the white delegation was thrown out and then by a viva voce vote the resolution of the provisional National Committee throwing out both delegations was adopted.

The Mississippi negroes were thrown out completely on the ground that the white delegates were regularly elected. Roosevelt is said to have protested against the use of the word "white delegates" in the call for the Mississippi State convention.

It is understood that Colonel Roosevelt suggested the action in the Florida and Mississippi cases ex tuto by the National Committee.

Should Big League Baseball Players Be Married? "Most Assuredly," Declare Wives of Boston Men

Umpire Johnson Also Answers the Question in the Affirmative.

Should a major league ball player be married?

"Certainly. Most assuredly. Best thing in the world for him," answers James B. Johnstone, the veteran umpire of the National League.

And what do the pretty and charming wives of the ball players say? They agree with Johnstone. They may not always agree with his decision, but on the marriage question they so agree.

"A major baseball player ought to be married. It is essential for his happiness. And his wife ought to attend all the games because when she is in the grand stand it gives him encouragement. It is an incentive for him to play his best," says Mrs. William Rariden. Her husband is a catcher for the Boston Nationals, and she ought to know.

It may be that the psychology of baseball players' wives is but little different from that of other classes of women. The dainty wives of the Boston Pilgrims do not care to discuss that phase of it, but they make statements that will cause considerable uneasiness among the bachelor players.

40 Per Cent. Are Married.

Umpire Johnstone says that forty per cent. of the major league players are married and that more than seventy-five per cent. of the so-called old players have signed life contracts.

A comparison of averages between the married players and those who have chosen to remain single is exceedingly interesting.

Ten men out of nineteen, who make up the Boston National team, are married.

The Red Sox team with twenty-two players has ten married men to twelve single players. The batting and fielding averages of the married players are greater than the averages of the single men. The wives of "Bill" Rariden, "Buster" Brown and "Ben" Houser of the Pilgrims say that this is simply due to the fact that a man is better at baseball when he is married.

Mrs. Houser, a petite little woman, who is an ardent baseball fan, is incidentally a psychologist. She applies this to baseball players and their wives. Here is what she says:

"My husband has a fielding average this year of .985. It is exceeded by only one on the team and that is Al Bridwell. Bridwell is married, too. All players ought to be married. Baseball is a business like anything else. Everybody knows that a married man with the responsibilities of a home is going to be more steady than a single man. I mean by that that he is more anxious to make good. Why the married men make good is perhaps for the reason that their wives encourage them. It doesn't make any difference how many errors a player makes, his wife sticks to him. She gives him the support he needs. I attend all the games and I think the wives of players should." Mrs. Houser sits directly back of the home plate. Her husband is first baseman for the Pilgrims.

In the first five men who lend the Pilgrims in batting average three are married, namely, Sweeney, Kling and Kirke.

Umpire Decides the Question.

Umpire Johnstone, who is married and has three children, declares that baseball players are conservative men as a rule.

"Do you think that a player is more nervous when his wife is in the grand stand watching his playings?" he was asked.

"Certainly not. On the other hand, I think he is less nervous than the single man, who perhaps knows his sweetheart is watching him with a critical eye. I think the wives of players as a rule like the game. A majority go as often as possible to see the games, and of course when a woman has children she cannot devote all her time to her husband's profession."

Mrs. Brown, wife of "Buster" Brown, one of the Boston National pitchers, met her husband at Ottawa, Iowa. Her marriage was the culmination of a baseball romance. She met her husband five years ago while he was playing on a college team.

"I wasn't very much interested in baseball in those days, but since my marriage I have become an ardent fan," she said. "I really have no other hobby aside from baseball. I certainly believe that baseball players should be married. A married man has a real incentive to do his best. Baseball is a lucrative profession and a woman's encouragement and help makes a man more apt to go up instead of down in his chosen line of work."

Mrs. William Rariden, wife of the Pilgrim catcher, has been married a little more than three years. The Raridens were school day sweethearts in Bedford, Ind. Mrs. Rariden knows baseball from A to Z. She attends all the games and helps to root for the Nationals.

Stahl, the first baseman on the Red Sox team, is married. Wagner, the shortstop, and Lewis, the left fielder, who has a fielding average of .954 and a batting average of .270, are also among the benedicts. Speaker and Hooper, the two brilliant Red Sox stars, are still on the single list.

The married men on the Boston National team are Kling, Rariden, Perdue, Brown, Hess, Houser, Sweeney, Bridwell, Jackson and Kirke. Those who make up the married coterie on the Red Sox team are Stahl, Yerkes, Wagner, Lewis, Henriksen, Ball, Engle, Rodiett, Collins and Hall.

SUNSHINE GIRLS HIT AT KEITH'S

The program at B. F. Keith's Theatre this week contains not a dull moment and furnishes a host of genuine laughs that end in hearty applause.

The hit of the week bids fair to be the elaborate and vivacious performances of John Tiller's Sunshine Girls. The musical sketch entitled "Fun in a Harem" might well be taken from the best of comic operas. It is full of life and fun at all times; there is a gorgeous scene representing the interior of the Sultan's palace where are seated a dozen or more wives of the harem. Through the window may be seen an American man-of-war riding at anchor in the harbor. When the two American young women visitors are about to be taken prisoners by the Sultan, a signal is given by one of the girls and a boom is heard from the distant man-of-war. A feature of the performance which produces roars of laughter is the three-legged dance by the old factotum, Hassan, played by Harry Rogerson.

"H" on the program is entitled "A special for the children," but no act in the whole performance is more intently followed both by old and young than that of Ergotti and the Lilliputians. The two little fellows perform such wonderful feats of strength and agility, and through it all appear so jolly that they become irresistable and receive applause again and again until they wind up with a wonderful aeroplane climax that is the finest bit of balancing seen in the theatre for many a day. Ergotti, lying on his back, supports an immense pole, at each end of which is a Lilliputian in a small aeroplane. By clever manipulation of Ergotti's feet the diminutive flying machines are whirled about the stage as though carried by the wind itself.

Swor and Mack, blackface comedians; Lloyd and Whitehouse, in an operatic travesty which includes a take-off upon Caruso and Tetrazini; Hal Merritt, "The Boy from Ipswich," with a lot of clever cartoons; Asaki, who juggles everything imaginable upon roller skates; Florence Bowles, an attractive little singing comedienne, and Casey and Merrit, in their sketch, "The New Musician," rounded out the bill.

Norumbega Park.

"The Dainty Quakeress" was the merry musical play that began a week's engagement in the open air theatre at Norumbega Park yesterday. It was one of those lively affairs in which there were both singing and dancing girls.

Paragon Park.

The cabaret show in the Palm Garden at Paragon Park continues as the most popular of all places at Nantasket Beach. The new program presented included several startling features that caught the crowd. The many other attractions in Paragon Park are receiving extensive attention.

Bass Point.

The splendid steamboat service to Bass Point makes that resort one of the most popular on the coast. Famed for its shore dinners, Bass Point is enjoying more prosperity than ever before.

Orpheum Theatre.

"A Night in the Park," a feature imported from England, was the bit of the new show at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday. There were a half dozen other vaudeville novelties.

Trips by Water.

The steamer Dorothy Bradford makes daily trips to historic Provincetown. Passengers on the boat have plenty of time to visit the village.

The Gloucester boats are carrying big crowds this season. The sail along the North Shore is one of the most attractive to be found anywhere.

Durbar Pictures.

Hub Theatre.

The new program at the Hub Theatre yesterday was made up of lively vaudeville numbers and motion pictures, supplemented with illustrated songs.

Scenic Temple.

Lenna Howes orchestra, which contributes special music at the Scenic Temple, always scores splendidly with the patrons of that house. New vaudeville was shown in the program yesterday.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

The Violet Marotte Company of Review Girls began a new week at the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday.

The Prison Ship.

The prison ship success is attracting many visitors. The boat is tied up at the Charles River Docks.

Globe Theatre.

The new program at the Globe Theatre yesterday was headed by "The Village Four," a singing combination that made good from the start. There were several other vaudeville features and a new list of motion pictures on the bill.

TEN MEN CONTROL $3,000,000,000; IT EARNS $15,000,000

I heard a man possessed of many state secrets figure at $3,000,000,000 the combined fortunes of ten American multimillionaires, says a writer in the Boston News Bureau.

He estimated these great fortunes as follows:

John D. Rockefeller, $1,000,000,000.
Andrew Carnegie, $500,000,000.
J. P. Morgan, $300,000,000.
William Rockefeller, $250,000,000.
George F. Baker $250,000,000.
James B. Duke, $200,000,000.
James Stillman, $200,000,000.
Henry C. Frick, $150,000,000.
W. K. Vanderbilt, $150,000,000.

The income of $3,000,000,000 at 5 cent. is $15,000,000 a year. Its recipients do not spent it all.

No mention is made of the Phippses, the Moores, the Reids, the Goulds, the Archbolds and others, whose fortunes range anywhere from $50,000,000 to $150,000,000.

MISS O'NEIL IN TRILBY REVIVAL

Miss Nance O'Neil received a great ovation when she appeared yesterday for the first time in Boston at the Majestic Theatre as "Trilby," in the revival of Du Maurier's novel, dramatized by Paul Potter.

The Morison Company deserves full credit for an excellent rendition of the play that has been familiar in Boston playhouses ever since its first appearance, seventeen years ago, at the Park Theatre.

Miss O'Neil's impersonation of Trilby, whose tragic love for Little Billie was thwarted by the hypnotic power of the diabolical Svengali was perfect. She showed a rare sense of development of that character, of the rapid steps that carried the light-hearted, affectionate girl of the studio to the open, frank, and there found her a pale and piteous captive imprisoned by the cruel hand of her master.

She was ingenious in her sincerity of her love for little Billie in the first act. Then her fear for Svengali at the end showed her helpless in his power.

She was impressive in her impersonation of the wretched woman from then on. Her trance-like walk and impassive face were unparalleled. Her work was graphic and moving in the pathetic words of entreaty to Svengali for mercy, in the mocking laughter at little Billie's question, and finally when in flaming words of rebellion, she came forth from the spell of the magician.

Miss O'Neil must divide honors, however, with Mr. Hazel, who, as Svengali, was unsurpassed. The support also was praiseworthy.

AL PALZER, THE GREATEST WHITE HEAVYWEIGHT : : : : By Tad

RED SOX RILEY'S COLUMN PILGRIMS

IF YOU were to judge by the relative experiences of the Athletics and the Red Sox you would shout that either Gregg and the "Naps" have it in for the Red Sox and prefer to help the poor struggling Athletics, or that Gregg has a little something on the Sox that he has not on the Athletics. In Saturday's double-header at Cleveland Harry Davis withheld Gregg and gave the Athletics two games, sending Gregg against the Sox Sunday. By unusual clouting the Red Sox won the Sunday game, but Davis returned Gregg yesterday, knowing that the Bostonians are usually slower on Mondays than on any other day of the week; that they usually fall for Gregg's pitching when Gregg is at his best and that the Mackmen seem to hit Gregg handily, and that the weakness of their own pitchers is chiefly accountable for their position now.

DAVIS used his best intelligence in saving up Gregg for the Red Sox, and he chose the fast southpaw because he, like most of the other managers, believes that the Red Sox are in first place more because of the superiority of their pitching staff, as a whole, than for any other single reason. The Sox made ten hits in yesterday's game, but could not win, although the "Naps" had but nine.

* * *

BEDIENT pitched a gilt-edged baseball game, but the Red Sox pitchers cannot do all of the work. The ten hits netted only one run.

AND Washington won again, 8 to 7, in ten sessions.

* * *

ANOTHER bit of world's series news, including a line upon the Pilgrims, who played such excellent baseball against the Pirates, can be had from yesterday's setup between Pittsburgh and the Giants, which the Pirates won after driving "Rube" Marquard from the box. This makes twenty-two wins and five losses for "The Hoglen" and increases Joe Wood's lead over the National League leader that much. Wood has won twenty-three games to offset his four losses.

WITH Johnnie Kling in sole control, the Pilgrims are playing better baseball than they have exhibited at any time heretofore this year. Kling has a machine, which, let alone, may work out its own salvation. With that policy in force and a bunch of good recruits added to the payroll, the Pilgrims may climb some day. In the meantime, they will probably play good baseball, as they have done consistently since conflicting managers ceased.

* * *

WHAT W. J. Macbeth said in the Boston Sunday AMERICAN concerning the rise of the Red Sox may be applied to the fall of the Pilgrims. Jake Stahl has been allowed to run his own team on the field, free of interference from higher up. One bad manager is better than three good ones. (No reflection on Stahl or Kling implied.) The Pilgrims had the misfortune of a president who thought he was manager, and an owner who interfered with the president. Finally, the owner and president got together, the president retired and the owner decided to let a base ball man run his baseball team while he devoted his attention to business in which he is better versed than he is in baseball.

IF Owner Gaffney now uses his energy to make money and lets Kling use his energy in running a baseball team, both Gaffney, Kling and the team will gain. Gaffney can then apply some of the extra money he makes to the purchase of baseball players for the team, which may work of the hinder which will fed and well cared for, and Kling can spend his time winning baseball games. While the box office clerks have to use more exertion counting receipts.

PRESIDENT GAFFNEY promptly squelched the Hughey Jennings story. When Hughey's Tigers began to descend the ladder all of the baseball writers sought a new job for Jennings. They finally placed him with the Boston Nationals. President Gaffney told the writer the other day that he had never communicated with Jennings on the subject of managing the Pilgrims or talked with him about any other topic, and he must send word to Kling today asking the Pilgrim manager to pay no attention to the Jennings yarns.

GEORGE TYLER had more speed in the opening Cincinnati game than he has shown before this season. He beat the Reds, 10 to 2. The Pilgrims hit all kinds of pitching, disposing of Moore and Humphreys and giving Davis a drubbing. Arthur Devlin delivered a triple and a double, three men being on bases each time, and added a single to his efforts in the eighth. Devlin has found a place where he fits, playing classy baseball at first, and he has done the most timely hitting of the year since the Pilgrim's return.

EASTERN FIGHT FOLLOWERS PICK IOWA GIANT AS THE COMING CHAMPION OF THE WORLD.

By TAD.

A "White Hope" has been found. At least that is the opinion of wise Eastern fight followers, and the "Hope" this time is Mr. Al Palzer, of Iowa.

Jack Johnson, by defeating Jeffries, caused all this "White Hope" trouble, just as Benjamin Franklin, by discovering lightening, caused all this fuss over telephone connections. If it hadn't been for Ben discovering that stuff we wouldn't have all these troubles with busy numbers.

But back to the biscuits.

When we mention "White Hopes" Palzer's name must necessarily come first. A "White Hope" like LIGHT, is hard to define, but you can tell it when you see it. Palzer has been seen and he has shown.

He is no notoriety seeker. It is doubtful if he has ever visited a newspaper office in his life. He has no stories to tell, no power, and has little inclination to meet any one except a rival for pugilistic honors.

His record to date includes knockouts over Tom Kennedy, Al Kaufman and Bombardier Wells. Can you expect much more from a novice about twenty-four years of age?

Palzer has everything a novice in the game should have. He has the ability to take a terrific licking, and his recuperative powers are almost unbelievable. Tom Kennedy lifted him clean off the floor with a right-hand punch in the fifth round of their fight, yet Palzer a moment later was whaling Kennedy from post to post, apparently unhurt.

Al Kaufmann, in his fight with Palzer, smashed the big Dutchman flush on the chin with that deadly right three times in succession in the fourth round of that fight, yet a few moments later was lying on the floor in a neutral corner taking the count. Jim Corbett, who had never seen Palzer until that night, fell off his chair with surprise.

In the Wells fight Palzar was knocked to the canvas in the first round as clean as ever a man was dropped. He looked as though he was gone. At the count of nine he scrambled to his feet, and, although drunk with punching, chased the dazed Englishman. Five minutes later Wells was carried to his corner a beaten man.

With about ten more fights under his belt and some good, careful coaching this Palzer will be a fit opponent for the good colored fighter who now wears the crown.

EXPERT DECLARES ATHLETICS ONLY RUNNER-UP IN RACE

SOX OR SENATORS FOR TITLE?

By MONTY.

The Athletics will not win the American League pennant. The Giants will win the National League pennant.

It is about time for a fellow to come out with some bold prophecy anent the league races on which he is willing to stake his reputation.

We stake all that we have on the first paragraph of this whopping wheeze. In other words, we proclaim that the 1911 condition of affairs in the majors will be upset in just the reverse order of what everybody expected.

At the start-off, many could not see the Giants comparing with Chicago, Philadelphia and Pittsburg in general efficiency. Others expected a close battle, betting even, some looked for the Giants to win by a small margin, but few specifically none—had any idea that they would be miles in the lead as they are now, with the rest of the field so far in the rear as to be hopelessly out of it.

The grandstand flutch of the Giants' recent Western trip, in which they more than broke even after losing seven out of the first nine games, puts them as distant from the opposition as ever, and their present home stand with the West as invaders should fatten their percentage even more.

Athletics Seem Out of It.

As to the Athletics—they originally were figured the clinch of a century. Every one expected them to spreadeagle the entire array by this time, just as the Giants have done.

Instead they are loping along behind both Red Sox and Senators. We, for one, would not be surprised if both these teams should stay ahead of the Mack crew to the end.

Between the two of them, we can discern at least one above the Quakers when it is all over.

This sounds as though we are picking the Red Sox. We are not. We are picking the brace—both clubs—and calculate that at least one of them will be able to maintain the pace all the remainder of the way.

To be sure, we, like everybody else, favor the Red Sox. They have the larger percentage of the two, and seem possibly a trifle stronger.

But we do not see them a sure thing, which is exactly what we do see in the two lapped together. Our bet, if we were inclined to speculate financially, would be three to one against the Athletics in this staffing, and even the Senators as a strong factor.

Don't you ever believe that the Senators are a joke team this year as in the past. Ever since Clark Griffith arrived in Washington they have been a formidable club.

Milan a Second Ty Cobb.

Walter Johnson at last is helped with the pitching burden by the rest of the staff, the youngsters in particular.

Absurdity has shown himself one of the best young catchers of several years and Henry and Williams are no slouches either.

Clyde Milan is proving a second Cobb in the outfield this season. Young Fisher is a screamy at third base.

George McBride is going great guns at short, Germany Schaefer is in his old game at second and the youth Chick Gandil is a gem of a first baseman and hitter.

Moeller and Walker, who stand on either side of Milan in the garden, both show real ability.

Senators Are Well Balanced.

The Senators are a well balanced team. They have won a majority of their conflicts with the Red Sox and have developed the unmerciful daylights out of all other clubs except the Athletics, who alone have broken better than even with them.

The National League race may now be chalked up as a Giant victory, but the American is still a battle—a fight between Senators and Red Sox.

WHY DO CANNED PLAYERS PUT UP BEST GAME AT HOME?

GREAT MYSTERY OF BASEBALL

By BILL BAILEY.

Why is it that a young ball player who has been adorned with the order of the tin can waits until he reaches the city from which he has been chased and then plays his head off? Why is it? Manager James Callahan wants to know.

There's Del Paddock, for instance. He was with the White Sox when they were in Texas last Spring and he looked a phenom one moment. The next he looked a bird call player.

Since he looked that the last time Callahan saw him he ordered him out of the camp. Paddock went to Dubuque and was forgotten. He bobbed up with the Highlanders and made everybody on the South Side look foolish.

He was up five times and walloped out a pair of safe ones, driving in three runs as well as scoring a pair himself. Nor were the hits of the scratch variety, either. They were good, solid wallops and would have been good for hits upon any field and under any condition.

He had five opportunities at third base and grabbed every one of them. His fielding was clean as a whistle.

"Way did they ever let him go?" bowled the fans who knew that the Paddock on the New York lineup was the youngster who went South with the Sox. If Paddock played every day as he did in the first game Manager Callahan would probably be asking himself the same question before the series was over.

This fellow Paddock probably caused as much discussion and as much worry as any of the youngsters taken South by the Sox.

And as many different reports were received from the fellows who played with him every day as were given on any young ball player. There was just one thing upon which they all seemed to agree. That was that Paddock could hit. There never seemed to be much doubt about that.

It's likely that one play he made had more to do with his leaving the club and being sent back to the minors than all the reports that were made. He was with the second team when that aggregation was down in San Antonio. During an exhibition game he was playing second base.

With a man on first the batter hit a fast one at the second baseman. The fellow who was on first started for second and then stopped. Paddock realized that he would have a double play if he attempted to tag the runner, so he shot the ball to first and got that man. Then he turned for second to take the return throw. So did the man who was on first.

The ball got to Paddock in plenty of time, but instead of tagging the runner and completing the double he was still laboring under the delusion that it was a force play and just held the sphere. With the result, of course, that the base runner was safe.

"I thought it was a force," laughed Paddock when Doc White, the acting manager, greeted him.

"Didn't you know that it wasn't a force after the batter was out at first?" bowled White.

"Sure, I do now," laughed Paddock. "The funny thing is that I made the same play the last year and was suspended for it."

At which the veterans with the squad threw up their hands, yelled enough, and immediately started the report that Paddock was carrying but a single off player. That story probably had more than any thing else to do with the fact that Paddock was turned back to the minors.

He was purchased not long ago and the fans who saw him with the Highlanders was his first in Chicago despite the fact that he played on the South Side. He looked a dandy ball player in that one contest. He may be and he may not be, because you can't judge the value of an athlete by one appearance.

M'CARTY BEATEN; STILL HOPEFUL

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—"I'm not discouraged and I know my friends are not either," was the optimistic utterance today of Luther McCarty, the Springfield, Mo., white hope, who was beaten on points by Jim Stewart of Brooklyn at Madison Square Garden last night. The contest was so close that many thought a draw would have been a better popular decision.

McCarty's debut in the East showed that he was a hard hitting man with plenty of courage and power to assimilate punishment, but totally lacking in the finer points of the game.

It was a clean, fast fight throughout. McCarty made a host of friends among the spectators. It was the consensus of opinion that with one or two more bouts like this the Missourian will show to better advantage.

Stewart made McCarty miss frequently in the first two rounds, but McCarty had the better of the third. Steward reaching him with stinging lefts in the next two.

McCarty got in some hard lefts to the sixth round, and had the better of that round and stiff rights to the body in the session, which ended in a fierce mix-up. Stewart scored the seventh and McCarty the eighth, both giving clever exhibitions. Stewart landed a hard right uppercut on McCarty's chin in the ninth.

The last round was hard fought. Stewart sent McCarty to the ropes with a hard left to the head, and a rapid exchange of short-arm work followed.

Fred Hicks of Detroit easily outclassed and outfought Willie Lewis, who recently returned from France.

BETTING EVEN ON FLYNN-BARRY

From all appearances Boston boxing fans will have one of the best white hope battles of the year to witness tonight when the Pilgrim A. A. opens it's Fall campaign. Jim Barry and Porky Flynn, two of the few white men in the heavyweight class who have met all comers, meet in a twelve-round contest.

In these days, when a million dollars, more or less, awaits the man who can come to the front and convince the sporting world that he is the equal of the champion, Jack Johnson, "hope" battles are finding favor. Flynn and Barry are credited with being the fastest white men in the heavyweight class, and with this in view it seems certain that the Hub fans will have a lively battle before them.

Both men finished up their training this morning in good condition and each expressed confidence. Barry has devoted nearly all of his time to perfecting his judgement of distance, as he is a "wild swinger" and lost one verdict to the Boston boxer on that account.

The semi-final bout has caused much talk among the club members, as Billy Allen, who bokes Gilbert Gallant, is unknown and is said to be a hard worker. Allen comes from New York, where he is credited with a defeat of Willie Beecher and other good boys.

Al Reddy, the Cambridge lightweight, who cleaned up the amateur title, will meet Joe Farren in a six round contest and Spider Kelly and Teddy Murphy are billed for six rounds of fast milling.

Many Olympic Stars for Elks' Carnival

The arrival home of the Olympic athletes yesterday caused activity on the part of the committee in charge of the field day to be held next Saturday at Fenway Park. The committee met last night at Elks Home Somerset street, and arranged the program of sports. The events will comprise 100 meters, 400 meters, 800 meters, 1500 meters, 5000 meters, running high jump, running broad jump, putting the shot, decathlon, pentathlon and team races. According to the committee, the following athletes have promised to compete: Drew, Whitney, Reldreth, Kvist, Strobino, Gutterson, Richards, Farrell, Hedlund, De Mar, Lilly, Rose, Sockalexis and Jim Thorpe.

Sterrett Lauded by Bobby Vaughn

Bobby Vaughn, the former Princeton star, who held down second base for the Yankees for a short time a few years ago, is quoted as saying that Sterrett, who is playing with the Yankees at present, is about the best player Princeton ever turned out.

"The reason Sterrett did not attract so much attention at college as other stars," says Vaughn, "is because he played out of his natural position. He was pressed into service as a catcher at Princeton, but naturally is a first baseman. All he needs is a little more experience to place him on a par with the game's best first sackers."

Out of his position or not, Sterrett ranked among the best college catchers of the season just closed.

BROWNS SIGN SHORTSTOP.

MOBILE, Ala., Aug. 6.—Manager Flin of the Mobile Southern League team, announced by wire from Memphis that he had sold Shortstop Walsh to the St. Louis Browns for $2,500.

It isn't what you pay for advertising; it's what advertising pays you. Advertising that pays is the only cheap advertising; advertising that doesn't pay is dear at any price. Advertising in the AMERICAN pays best, therefore it is the cheapest.

Olympic Athletes Suspended by Club

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—The New York A. C. members of the Olympic team who happened to come home within the past week were shocked when they were quietly informed that they were under suspension for the nonpayment of club dues.

It appeared that all the athletes were quibbling for the glory of the organization the athletic committee took action on the indebtedness of the athletes and had their names placarded. In all a list of thirty men formed the delinquents' ruling powers, and now the members who are interested in the club's athletic prowess are wondering where the club will get men to do battle in the approaching Metropolitan and National championships.

"Muggsy" McGraw Is the Real Giant

John J. McGraw, the Little Napoleon of the New York Giants, is a wise manager, a leader who seldom overlooks a bet.

That he is more than 50 per cent. of the New York team's strength is generally conceded by everyone who has studied carefully his methods, and watched his policy.

When the Pirates were at the Polo Grounds recently Mike Donlin and Larry Doyle got into a kidding match. Larry handed one to Mike about being a has-been. "Go on, you boob," was Mike's reply. "You have to have someone on the bench to do your thinking for you."

Twas rather an unkind cut for Captain Doyle, for it was as close to the truth as Mike could have put it. McGraw does three-quarters of the Giants' thinking, and that is no knock on the athletes under him.

He is supreme in his camp. His word is law, and woe betide the team-mate disobeys. He rules with a rod of iron, and demands that his every order be executed as it is given. That is one of the secrets of his success.

FAUST BACK AT FARM.

Manager McGraw of the Giants has received a letter from Charley Faust who is back on the farm at Marion, Kan., where he belongs. Some one told Faust to go home and make the club send for him, as the Boston Club did for Hub Perdue. Charley went home ten days ago and he now writes to inquire why the summons has not been received.

Baseball Notes

Ever since he joined the Yankees, after leaving St. Louis Harridge has been a star at third base. But, like all veterans, he has come to the time when he must watch a recruit try for his job. Del Paddock, a former White Sox, is now making him shiver for the place, and unless Del eases up a trifle Harridge is liable to be a bench warmer.

* * *

Shortstop Ernie Johnson, whose work with the Dubuque Three-Eye League team this year has been sensational, was sold to the Chicago Sox by Manager Rowland. Comiskey gave $500 and will pay $2,000 more if the youngster makes good.

* * *

The unusual success of the Northern Indians League during the present season has prompted preliminary steps toward the organization of an Eastern Indiana League along the same lines. The cities to make up the league will probably be Mishawaka, Elkhart, Kendallville, Warsaw, Angola and Lagrange.

Shortstop Scott of Youngstown will undoubtedly bring more money to the Youngstown Club than any other player in the Central League will be sold for this year. No less than six major league clubs have after the brilliant infielder, and offers ranging from $2,500 to $4,000 have been made for his release.

Something that is very rare in baseball, the reversing of an umpire's decision, was pulled in the Washington-Detroit game. Cobb was stealing home. Williams touched him out, but then dropped the ball. Umpire Connolly called him out, but the Tigers raised such a roar that after a conference with Hart, he changed his decision and allowed the run.

Cincinnati Club Is Awarded Frill

CINCINNATI, Aug. 6.—The National Baseball Commission decided that the Cincinnati National League Club was entitled to the services of Pitcher Frill, formerly of the Jersey City Club of the International League.

The commission held that Frill belonged to the St. Louis Club and that St. Louis acted within its rights in calling the player from Jersey City and releasing him to Cincinnati.

BORDENSTEIN SETS NEW CLUB RECORD

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Charlie Bordenstein, the Morris A. A. broad jumper, bettered the record for the hop-step-and-jump in the monthly games of his club in Macomb's Dam Park. Bordenstein won the event from scratch with a leap of 40 feet 11 inches, increasing the club mark by three inches.

William Tandler won a brace of victories, crossing the line a winner of the 220-yard and 300-yard sprints. J. P. O'Connor, the distance runner, took second place in the three-quarter-mile race and the two-mile-run handicap.

SCOUT DOWD HOME.

Tom Dowd, the Red Sox scout, has just returned from a trip through the Central West and will remain in Boston for a few days. Tom stated that he has seen some fine young ball players on this trip and that a few of them will be taken over by the Red Sox.

Amherst Football to Start Sept. 13

Barr J. Connolly, Jr., captain of the Amherst College football team for this Fall, and Coach Henry Hobbs, the former Yale tackle, held a consultation yesterday afternoon, before the former left for Millbrook on a month's vacation.

It was decided to issue a call to the Amherst candidates to report September 13.

Roberts, the sprinter and football player, will probably act as an assistant coach. McGay fullback, Hubbard halfback, Chamberlayns centre, Proudfoot end and Guetter tackle, are the regulars available. Thomas Creed, unable to play last Fall, will also be eligible.

SOX DEFI BAY VIEWS.

Mettinger King of the South Boston White Sox is anxious that his team meet the Bay Views. Jud Logan has issued a challenge to the Bennett A. A., but it is not necessary to go out of his own district to meet a team superior to the Bay Views is the way Manager King puts it. The White Sox have defeated the Bennetts, 3 to 1.

Connie Mack Corrals Another Collegian

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 6.—Robert Stevenson, who was considered one of the best football and baseball men last year at the University of Minnesota, and who was unable to play because of eligibility rules, has been signed by the Philadelphia Club of the American League.

Stevenson's leg was broken while he was playing semi-professional ball with an Alexandria, Minn., team last week, and he will not report until next Spring.

Gutterson Is Given Great Home Welcome

SPRINGFIELD Vt., Aug. 6.—Albert L. Gutterson the Olympic hero, was given a grand reception in the public square, following an automobile parade in his honor.

The champion was met at Bellows Falls by Colonel Walter W. Brown and Herbert G. Tupper of the reception committee and President Guy Pierce Benton of the University of Vermont, who took the trip by automobile also by his father, Charles Gutterson, and two sisters, Mrs. Frank Whitcomb and Miss Jessie Gutterson, and Mrs. Whitcomb's husband and two children.

Going to Charlestown, N. H., by automobile, Gutterson and party dined there. When they arrived in Springfield they were met about three-quarters of a mile south of the square. There was a parade of twenty or more automobiles containing members of the committee and leading citizens. There was cheering all the way to the square. A band furnished music. Main street was decorated with flags.

A tribute was paid to Gutterson, both as student and alumnus of the University of Vermont, by President Benton, who made an address. The athlete was then presented with a bronze statuette, a replica of the flying Mercury by Jean Boologna at Florence.

The presentation speech was made by Colonel W. W. Brown, and Gutterson made an appropriate response. The crowd numbered about 1,500 persons, and Gutterson was repeatedly cheered. It was a warm welcome home.

The Making of a Pretty Girl

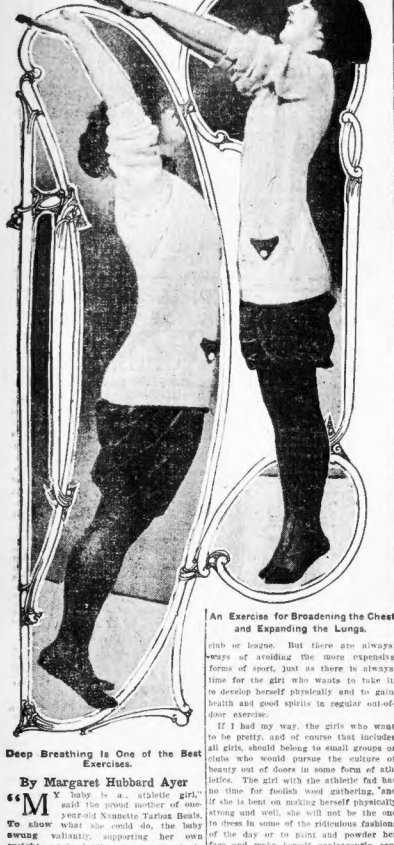
THE ATHLETIC MISS



Deep Breathing Is One of the Best Exercises.

By Margaret Hubbard Ayer

"My baby is a... athletic girl," said the proud mother of one-year-old Nannette Tarbox Beals. To show what she could do, the baby swung valiantly, supporting her own weight while holding to her mother's fingers.

The daughter of this well-known business woman, Mrs. Jessie Tarbox Beals, began her athletic development when she was about two months old, for there is no age limit for the athletic girl.

You can begin when ever you want to, and you can go on as long as you like, or take up athletics when you are well advanced in middle life. The grandmother of some friends of mine still goes swimming at eighty, and she attributed her superb health to the practice of outdoor exercise.

Every girl should have some sort of outdoor fad—something that combines exercises and amusement—some sort of athletics.

When you talk of athletics many a girl thinks at once of golf or tennis, polo, riding or some sport which necessitates an expenditure of money either for horses or costumes or for the implements used. Riding, for instance, is quite beyond the pale for those of moderate income who live in the city, and the girl who lives inland can't enjoy the delights of swimming as can the girl who is in Boston, for instance, or in the lake cities.

Not Expensive

It is this idea of expense that keeps so many girls from joining some athletic club or league. But there are always ways of avoiding the more expensive forms of sport, just as there is always time for the girl who wants to take it to develop herself physically and to gain health and good spirits in regular out-of-door exercise.

An Exercise for Broadening the Chest and Expanding the Lungs.

If I had my way, the girls who want to be pretty, and of course that includes all girls, should belong to small groups or clubs who would pursue the culture of beauty out of doors in some form of athletics. The girl with the athletic fad has no time for foolish food gathering, and if she is bent on making herself physically strong and well, she will not be the one to dress in some of the ridiculous fashions of the day or to paint and powder her face and make herself unpleasantly conspicuous in other ways.

The girl who wants to go in for the simplest, as well as the most healthful, form of athletics can join a walking club or get one up consisting of friends and, if possible, one older person, as chaperon and instructor.

Very Popular

These walking clubs are quite popular in England, and there is no cost attached to such an organization. The chaperon or instructor should be a person of moderate leisure who has time to study up the points of historic interest in the neighborhood. No matter how new the city or town, there is always some place not far away where some interesting event in history occurred. Get books on the subject at the library.

The walks should be taken to these points of interest and the instructor should know enough to call the attention of the members of the club to bad carriage, awkward walk or other defects. The club should meet once a week at least for a long walk, and during the course of the season one or two tours to distant points should be planned and carried out, on foot, of course. These clubs are very popular in Germany as well as in England, where a group of young women with a chaperon, and sometimes a guide for longer trips, will go on walking tours lasting from two to six weeks.

Walking clubs should train their members to the longer feats of endurance by slow degrees. On rainy days, when the members cannot take their outing, they should meet at the home of the member who has the largest rooms, and go through systematic exercises to strengthen themselves in lungs and limbs—deep-breathing exercises, which I have frequently given, and foot exercises, of which this is one of the best.

Stand erect, wearing soft slippers or, better still, in stocking feet, raise the arms above the head, lift the body stretching upward, inhale deeply and raise the body on the toes, keep it right, retain the breath for several seconds, exhale slowly, lowering the body and arms. An exercise for broadening the chest and expanding the lungs: Stand erect, extend the arms forward, hands together, throw the chest out, and at the same time swing the arms backward, clapping the arms behind.

Two Flats

Miss Spinster—What did she ever see in him that made her want to marry him?

Miss Oldmaid—Nothing. She married him because she wanted a house and home of her own.

Miss Spinster—Poor girl! And he took her to a flat.

FOR THE NECK AND SHOULDERS

A Free Prescription That Instantly Removes Blemishes, Tan, Freckles And the Wrinkles And Marks Left By High Collars.

The Dutch neck and the evening gown too often expose the discolorations and blemishes of high collars or the effects of tan and freckles. It is easy to overcome these conditions and make the neck beautiful and white and soft and smooth —to remove, in other words, every blemish and to make the Dutch collar as attractive as it is comfortable. This prescription can also be used on the shoulders, and it is marvelously effective to beautify the hands and arms.

If you want to try it go to your druggist, get an empty two-ounce bottle, also a one-ounce bottle of Kuhn Compound. Pour the entire bottle of Kuhn into the two-ounce bottle, add quarter an ounce of witch hazel, then fill with water. Prepare this at your own home and then you know what you have. One application will astonish you. It is delicious ly cool and soothing and is not affected by perspiration. It will not rub off.

Shake out it on one hand only, or on one side of the neck, and note the difference you will see the wonderful change it makes instantly. The results are permanent, and continued use of this prescription will result in a skin as soft and smooth as a child's, a skin from which redness and roughness and freckles have been entirely removed.

A Bachelor's Diary

JOSEPHINE LAUGHS WHEN SHE HEARS OF THE CHILD'S DEATH AND MAX PARTS WITH HER FOREVER

By MAX

JULY 20—When I think of that meeting with Josephine in the park, such a wave of disgust sweeps over me that I put down my pen and walk the floor.

I am filled with loathing for her type of woman. And I am overcome with shame that I let her bewitch me. I am bowed in remorse that I have wasted so much emotion over a woman so absolutely mercenary, selfish, narrow and pitiless.

I had no desire to stop and speak to her when I ran into her that day. I was thinking of Elizabeth and longing for her. The man who has a child to love has all that life can hold to work for and hope for and live for. When that child is gone, it seems as if there is nothing left.

Life becomes a journey over desolate places with no promise of better scenes ahead, and with only one hope, and that is that the journey may be short.

I was thinking all this when I met Josephine. I raised my hat and would have passed, but she stopped me.

"Did you," she asked, with a sneer in her voice, "enjoy that trip to Europe?"

Europe. For a moment I couldn't think what she meant. Then it came to me. She had paid me no attention the evening I called, and in a fit of boyish pique I had told her when I took my departure that I was sailing next day for Europe. The next morning my poor little Elizabeth was taken sick.

"You haven't heard," I said, speaking with some effort, "of the death of my little niece?"

She laughed! Do you hear, Diary, she LAUGHED! I told her of the death of a child, and she LAUGHED!

A Staggering Offense

For a moment I was stupefied. All my life I have idealized Woman. She has represented to me all that is good and pure and noble. I could not believe my own ears when I heard that laugh.

"You didn't understand me," I said, the horrible conviction thrusting itself upon me that she DID understand. "You surely didn't hear what I said. I asked you if you knew that I had lost Elizabeth. She died just three weeks ago."

"I understood you," she said, and laughed again! "I suppose now you will make twice the fool of yourself over the brat that is left."

Then, still laughing, as if she had heard the merriest of jokes, she turned and walked away.

Diary, there was murder in my heart for a minute. I longed to overtake her and choke her words back in her throat. My fingers tingled for the task. I have never in my life felt as I felt for one brief moment that day. Then came the old familiar sensation of a little child's fingers thrusting themselves into my hand, and I felt that I was being led away.

I walked to a park bench nearby, and, bowing my head on the back of it, I shed the bitterest tears I have shed since I was a boy.

July 22.—I spent last evening in writing letters. All the little notes of sympathy I received three weeks ago were answered, and after writing them and giving them to Tompkins to mail. I wrote letters to Manette and to Miss Lee.

I was reminded when Tompkins came into the room that I am not the only one in this big house who is beset. He looked thin and haggard.

"The house seems too big now, Mr. Max," he said when he was leaving the room.

It wasn't much, but it meant a great deal. Tenanted by memories of the sound of little feet running up and down stairs, and a merry, babyish laugh, the house seemed tragically large.

A Ray of Hope

"It will be less lonesome," I said, trying to cheer us both, "when Miss Manette returns.

The letter to Manette was a difficult one to write. Mrs. Spencer had convinced me that the wisest thing to do is to tell Manette that Elizabeth has gone away.

"She shall not hear that word 'Death' if I can help it," wrote Mrs. Spencer.

So my letter to Manette was filled with descriptions of the pleasant little journey Elizabeth had taken, and how happy she looked when she left us. That, at least, was true.

Manette must come home soon. I told her, and when she returned and didn't find Elizabeth here she must not cry for her.

"Some day," I wrote, "you will go where she is, but you must be good, for that is what would please her most."

Then I wrote a long letter to Miss Lee. Somehow it relieves my lonesomeness to write to her as nothing else can do. Her replies are short, but they are sensible and womanly and comforting.

Some Suggestions for Summer Days

FROM THE LATEST PARIS DESIGNS

A Slightly Draped Skirt

A Pannier Design

A Walking Costume

The walking costume is carried out in charmeuse. The long lines of this model give a most elegant appearance especially becoming to tall figures. The skirt opens slightly, revealing an undershirt of minon over brocade. The wide belt and the bow at the throat are velvet.

The chief feature of the pannier costume is the deep pannier. The kimono bodice has sleeves to the wrists, finished with lace ruffles.

A "Nutty" Idea

DRAMA of the fiercest pattern was on the bill of fare at the local theatre.

The beautiful, fair-haired heroine had been duly bound and cast into a cage with a savage gorilla by the beetle-browed villain. The h.-b. villain, by the way, was in search of revenge.

"Oh, what shall I do? What shall I do?" cried the heroine, as she espied the untamed monster springing toward her (as per program).

There was a hush among the audience and silence in the orchestra. 'Twas indeed a fateful moment. Then came the inevitable hint from the gods, breaking the magic spell.

"Pitch him a nut, miss."

Hunting a Husband

No. 23 The Widow Sees the Artist for the Last Time and Realizes She Has Made a Fool of Herself

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

"LOVE," says a cynic, "is the intense desire to have some particular person admire us as much as we admire ourselves." "Love," says someone else, "is self-sacrifice for the good of another."

Beatrice Minor did not know that she had ever cared—as the ideal wife is supposed to care—for the man she married. Yet in the first months of their wedded life she had felt a deeper affection for her husband than she had ever experienced for any other man. If she had been less self-centered and more clear-minded she would, before deciding to accept Sidney Randolph as Tom Minor's successor, have forced herself to look her sentiments squarely in the face. In such case she might have discovered that the emotion which had decided her to accept the offer of marriage which she was sure would soon be forthcoming was a mixture of fascination aroused by the artist's personality and of respect for his social position and his accomplishments. She was altogether too delighted with a vista for the luxuries of life with which he could provide her, she was willing to make up for the more sincere affection which she believed he had for her. Yet, with a kind of self-justification, she had convinced herself that she really cared for the artist. Moreover, Beatrice Minor was not given to introspection.

Keeping Calm

After Randolph had asked and gained permission to call again that evening, and had taken his departure, the widow determined to fill the intervening hours with some occupation to keep her thoughts steady and her nerves calm. So she sat down in her own room to put the finishing touches on a dainty white frock she had been making for Jean. The little girl and her brother were invited to a children's party for that night, and the pair sat beside her, watching her deft fingers at work upon the costume destined to grace the festive occasion. And, as the mother worked, and listened to the prattle of her little son and daughter, she mused of the change which her second marriage might bring to her children, and, not without some misgivings, she spoke her thoughts aloud.

"Suppose, dears," she ventured, hesitatingly, "God should send you another papa—would you be glad?"

The children were silent for a moment.

"Send papa back from heaven?" queried Jack, somewhat puzzled.

"No," answered his mother, suppressing an involuntary shudder. She had thought little lightly of Lee Jones' marriage, and it was not a pleasant memory. "But suppose I were to marry again?"

"Who would you marry?" asked Jack, bluntly.

"I have not decided just yet to marry anybody," equivocated the mother. "But I am wondering if you would like Mr. Randolph for a father?"

Jean clapped her tiny hands delightedly. "Oh, yes!" she exclaimed.

"I like Mr. Maynard better," objected Jack sturdily. "Marry him, please, mother?"

"Silly kiddies!" laughed Beatrice. And, although she turned the conversation into other channels, she was secretly relieved at the lack of opposition evinced by her children.

She had seen the little ones off to the party under the care of the maid, and had scarcely had time to put a few last touches to her own toilette, when the whirr of a motor in the street below, and a few minutes later, the sound of her own doorbell, announced the artist's arrival. Her heart beat fast and her cheeks were aglow as she welcomed him. He was cool and graceful in demeanor, as always, and Beatrice admired for the hundredth time his poise and self-possession as he followed her into the drawing-room, and took a chair near hers.

His Good-By

For a time hostess and guest chatted lightly, while Beatrice's pulses beat less tumultuously and her voice became softer and steadier.

"You sail soon?" she asked at last.

"On Monday, on the Carthusia," answered the man. "France calls me and I must go. Paris seems to me like home, and I have been away so long! I shall go to Barbizon and hope to make you famous in a picture I have in mind, using the sketches I have of you as my inspiration. So, although I leave you here in the body, I carry your memory and your face with me."

"I shall miss you," confessed Beatrice softly.

"And I, you," he replied frankly. "It is you who have made the city in Summer tolerable, and even delightful, for a man roomed artist. I know of no greater magic."

"But you return in the Fall?" she queried, faintly.

"That will depend upon circumstances beyond my control," he answered simply.

Beatrice felt herself pale, then flush hotly. Surely only this afternoon he had spoken of coming back in September! But the artist did not notice the change in the woman's face, and drifted off into rhapsodies on the Barbizon woods in Summer. "Rousseau, Corot, none of them has ever done them full justice," he concluded.

"I should like to see them," said Beatrice, wistfully.

"I wish you might!" he agreed with unsentimental heartiness.

The clock on the mantel chimed half past 9. He glanced at it and slipped his hand into his pocket.

A Beautiful Present

"I must go now," he said. "I have an engagement in New York tomorrow that will keep me in that hot city until the time of my sailing. I shall not see you again. I cannot thank you as I should for all your goodness to me. You are the only woman I ever knew besides my mother who would be simply my disinterested friend, and I will always remember you as that. Before I go, won't you accept this as a little souvenir of our happy times together? Wear it sometimes and think of me."

He handed her a bracelet of hammered silver. She had seen it in his studio. It was of ancient Moorish handiwork, and beautifully embossed with strange, twisting figures. She took the gift mechanically, then, rallying her self-control, thanked the giver gracefully, and bade him goodby, all her woman's pride in her smiling eyes and her cheerful words of farewell. But, when the door was closed behind her guest, she rushed to her room and, throwing herself upon the bed, sobbed stormily.

Some of her fears may have come from sadness and loneliness; some were certainly the outcome of disappointment; but the most numerous and most bitter of all were caused by the shameful consciousness that she had made a fool of herself.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

ACCORDING TO CUSTOM.

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

THERE are pictures and poems and songs on the theme of "Love's Awakening."

A subject to attract keener attention would be "Love's First Wound." A great many of these wounds are received before death results, and no one can tell when the death blow finally falls, for Love has a way of rising up and winking one eye when it is apparently ready for the tomb.

Daysey Mayme's love for the drug clerk had received its first wound. She had seen him with another! Oh, woe is me, and as many alases as the sympathy of the reader can spare.

She began to talk a great deal of A False One's Perfidy, and There is No One in the World One Can Trust; Is There, Now? Did You Ever Trust Any One, and Fail to Find Your Trust Betrayed, etc., etc.

Then her love suffered its second wound, gasped and died, and she prepared it for the tomb according to the long-established custom.

For two days she let her hair go uncurled, and ate pickles and sighed, and gazed with sad eyes at the moon whenever that luminary of love gave her a chance.

Then she took action. The first thing to do was to return his gifts.

She searched the house from parlor to kitchen, and all she found was a book advertising cold cream. It was a blow, but even the gifts of a stingy man must be treated according to tradition.

There was also a note asking her to go to a free church concert and a faded flower.

Daysey Mayme tied the book advertising cold cream in white tissue paper, using a pale blue ribbon, which she spotted carefully with her tears, that being a rule that must never be violated.

The faded flower she pinned to the note asking her to go to a church social, and on the note she shed one, two, three big round tears, each leaving a blot large enough for a blind man to see.

She sent for a messenger boy and gave him the package, looking after him as long as he was in sight, with her vision so blurred by tears that he seemed to be swimming off. And when her sorrow grew beyond her control and the tears began to flow it was as if he were drowning.

When he had gone down in the waters of her grief it was with the corner out of sight she returned to her room and looked around with a sad sigh, that being also according to precedent.

Then she picked out the very saddest book she could find and forgot her own sorrow in the greater sorrow of the heroine.

That night Daysey Mayme ate more supper than she had eaten in three days, and the next morning she was heard humming a gay little tune as she curled her hair.

Again love had died and been interred according to tradition and custom. Again her heart was ready for a new occupant.

A Word to Women on Health Matters

Women are generally careful about the state of their health, and they are apt to make good use of remedies known as diseases preventatives. Germicides and antiseptics are included in this class, but the greatest care should be exercised in using any which contain poisons, unless prescribed by a physician.

By reason of its absolute safety and its beneficial results, Paxtine is generally have strongly recommended Pyree's Antiseptic Powder. PART 1.—(Continued)

THESE rather startling injunctions were read by George with no very perceptible diminution of the uneasiness which it was only natural for him to feel at the oddity of his position. But only the demand last made produced any impression on him. The man they were waiting for was no further up than the second floor, but instinctively George's hand had flown to his necktie, and he was only stopped from its premature rearrangement by a warning look from Sweetwater.

George Hesitates

"Not unless you know him," whispered the detective, and immediately launched out into an easy talk about some totally different business which George neither understood, nor was expected to. I darn say.

Suddenly the steps below paused, and George heard Sweetwater draw in his breath in irrepressible dismay. But they were immediately resumed, and presently the head and shoulders of a workingman of uncommon proportions appeared in sight on the stairway.

George cast him a keen look, and his heart rose to his throat, but fell back again. The approaching man was tall, very well-proportioned and easy of carriage; but the face—such of it as could be seen between his cap and the high collar he had pulled up about his ears, conveyed no exact impression to George's mind, and he did not dare to give the signal Sweetwater expected from him. Yet as the man went by with a dark and lowering glance at them both, he felt his hand rise again, though he did not complete the action, much to his own disgust and to the evident disappointment of the watchful detective.

"You're not sure?" he now heard, oddly interpolated in the stream of half-whispered talk with which the other endeavored to carry off the situation.

George shook his head. He could not rid himself of the old impression he had formed of the man in the snow.

"Mr. Dunn, a word with you," suddenly spoke up Sweetwater to the man who had just passed them. "That's your name, isn't it?"

"Yes, that is my name," was the quiet response, in a voice which was at once rich and resonant; a voice which George knew—the voice of the impassioned speaker he had heard resounding through the sleet as he cowered within hearing in the shed behind the Avenue A tenement. "Who are you who wish to speak to me at so late an hour?"

He was returning to them from the door he had unlocked and left slightly ajar.

"Well, we are—you know that," smiled the ready detective, advancing half way to greet him. "We're not members of the Associated Brotherhood, but possibly have hopes of being so. At all events, we should like to talk the matter over, if as you say, it's not too late."

"I have nothing to do with the club—"

"But you spoke before it."

"Yes."

"Then you can give us some sort of an idea how we are to apply for membership."

Mr. Dunn met the concentrated gaze of his two evidently unwelcome visitors with a frankness which dashed George's confidence in himself, but made little visible impression upon his strong companion.

"I should rather see you at another time," said he. "But—his hesitation was inappreciable save to the keenest ear—if you will allow me to be brief, I will tell you what I know—which is very little."

Sweetwater was greatly taken back.

THE SUSPECT ADOPTS A THREATENING ATTITUDE.

As Sweetwater began to speak he whom he addressed as Dunn drew a pistol from his breast pocket and laid it on the table.

All he had looked for, as he was careful to tell my husband later, was a sufficiently prolonged conversation to enable George to mark and study the workings of the face he was not yet sure of. Nor did the detective feel quite easy at the readiness of his reception; nor any too well pleased to accept the invitation which this man now gave them to enter his room.

But he suffered no betrayal of his misgivings to escape him, though he was careful to intimate to George, as they waited in the doorway for the other to light up, that he should not be displeased at his refusal to accompany him further in this adventure, and even advised him to remain in the hall till he received his summons to enter.

But George had not come as far as this to back out now, and as soon as he saw Sweetwater advance into the now well-lighted interior he advanced, too, and began to look around him.

The room, like many others in these old-fashioned tenements, had a jog just where the door was, so that on entering they had to take several steps before they could get a full glimpse of its four walls. When they did, both showed surprise. Comfort, if not elegance, confronted them, which impression, however, was immediately lost in the evidences of work, manual as well as intellectual, which were everywhere scattered about.

The man who lived here was not only a student, as was evinced by a long wall full of books, but he was an art lover, a musician, an inventor, and an athlete. So much could be learned from the most cursory glance. A more careful one picked up other facts fully as startling and impressive. The books were choice; the invention to all appearance a practical one; the art of a high order, and the musical such as was in view, of a character of which the most taste need not be ashamed.

Trying to Recall

George began to feel quite conscious of the intrusion of which they had been guilty, and was amazed at the ease with which the detective carried himself in the presence of such manifestations of culture and good, hard work. He was trying to recall the exact appearance of the figure he had seen stooping in the snowy street two nights before, when he found himself staring at the occupant of the room, who had taken up his stand before them and was regarding them while they were regarding the room.

He had thrown aside his hat and rid himself of his overcoat, and the fearless mien of his aspect seemed to daunt the hitherto dauntless Sweetwater, who, for the first time in his life, perhaps, hunted in vain for words with which to start conversation.

Had he made an awful mistake? Was this Mr. Dunn what he seemed, an unknown and careful genius, battling with great odds in his honest struggle to give the world something of value in return for what it had given him? The quick, almost deprecatory glance he darted at George betrayed his dismay; a dismay which George had begun to share, notwithstanding his growing belief that the man's face was not wholly unknown to him even if he could not recognize it as the one he had seen outside the Clermont.

"You seem to have forgotten your errand," came in quiet, if not good natured, sarcasm from their patiently waiting host.

"It's the room," muttered Sweetwater, with an attempt at his old-time ease, which was not as fully successful as usual. "What an all-fired genius you must be. I never saw the like. And in a tenement house, too! You ought to be in one of those big, new studio buildings in New York, where artists be and everything you see is beautiful. You'd appreciate it, you would."

The detective started, George starred, at the gleam which answered him from a very uncommon eye. It was a tempestuous flash, however, and quickly veiled, and the tone in which this Dunn now spoke was anything but an encouraging one.

"I thought you were desirous of joining a Socialistic fraternity," said he; "a true aspirant for such honors doesn't care for beautiful things unless all can have them. I prefer my tenement. How is it with you, friend?"

Sweetwater found some sort of a reply, though the thing which this man now did must have startled him, as it certainly did George, they were so grouped that a table quite full of anomalous objects stood at the back of their host, and consequently quite beyond their own reach. As Sweetwater began to speak, he whom he had addressed by the name of Dunn, drew a pistol from his breast pocket and laid it down, barrel toward them, on this table top. Then he looked up courteously enough, and listened till Sweetwater was done. A very handsome man, but one not to be trifled with in the slightest degree. Both recognized this fact, and George, for one, began to edge toward the door.

"Now I feel easier," remarked the giant, swelling out his chest. He was unusually tall, as well as unusually muscular. "I never like to carry arms; but sometimes it is unavoidable. Damn it, that hurts!" He was looking at his arm, which certainly showed soil. "With you pardon me," he pleasantly apologized, stepping toward a washstand and plunging his hands into the basin. "I cannot think with dirt on me like that. Simple, isn't it? did you speak?"

A Sudden Change

He turned quickly on George, who had certainly uttered an ejaculation, but receiving no reply, went on with his task, completing it with a care and a discretion of their presence which showed him up in still another light.

Some Household Suggestions

The handbag or satchel of undressed kid, when soiled by usage, should not be turned over to the professional cleaner. The secret of restoration is a piece of sand-paper rubbed over the surface. A very fine grade of sand-paper is required. When it is used with care the effect is magical, and no injury to the material accrues. Many kinds of leathers without polished surfaces—for example, suede, undressed and coze calf-skin—can be cleaned this.

A good many women suffer, at the seaside, from that affliction known as the peeled nose. To avoid this, apply a good cold cream, keeping the features well anointed with it whenever you are alone in your room, and always before retiring. Do not use too much powder on the nose if you are subject to this form of sunstroke, since it tends to dry up the natural oils, and renders the nose more susceptible to the sun's rays.

In giving medicine in liquid form to a baby place the point of the spoon containing the medicine against the roof of the mouth. Administered in this way it will be impossible for the child to choke or eject the medicine.

When washing glasses or earthenware place the articles in warm salted water. They will clean more quickly.

When selecting poultry see that the feet are soft and moist, the eyes clear and the flesh pliant.

It is sometimes difficult, by the use only of the ordinary nail brush and soap and water, to keep the fingernails as white as they should be just beneath the edge of the nails. An excellent means of cleansing these parts is to use a tooth brush instead and brush is needed is to dip the corner of a towel into a solution of warm ammonia water and draw the rolled corner under the nails, rubbing the brush at the same time well in order to work out all dirt.

Wouldn't Wash

HE was a seedy looking tramp, and his favorite dodge was the "pity-the-old-sailor" notion.

He called at a likely house along the country road.

"Could you do something for a poor old sailor, mum?" he asked, as the sour-faced lady opened the door.

"Why, certainly," she echoed.

"Yes, mum," replied the tramp. "Nigh on forty year I followed the water."

"Well," replied the owner of the house, "it's a pity you didn't catch it!"

Then the door was slammed in his face, and another hope was shattered.

The First One

"YES," exclaimed the newly married woman to a bunch of her friends, as they sipped their tea table, "for three months after our marriage my husband made me bake hot cakes for him at every meal."

"And yet," chorused her friends, "your husband is a strong, healthy-looking fellow!"

"Well," asked the lady, "what about that?"

"Oh, the doctors say that such a diet is dreadful, and that"——

"But this husband is healthy. I was referring to my first," remarked the lady complacently.

To make a perfect shampoo powder, take a quantity of powdered orris root with an original package of Parisian Sage. Mix powders well. Use a mixture on the head and brush it out thoroughly.

"Wild hives are a disfiguring blemish to a beautiful face. They can be quickly and safely removed by the use of delicate powder. Mix powdered alum with enough water to cover the hair, apply and after a minute or two rub off, wash the skin and the hair will be good.

GARDNER URGES TRUST CONTROL

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Desiring to get before the country in greater detail facts concerning the Steel Trust set forth in the Democratic report, Chairman Stanley of the steel investigating committee, by resolution asks that Thursday be set aside by the House for a general discussion of the several reports that have been filed by members of the committee.

Mr. Stanley today introduced his bills regulating industrial corporations, amending the Sherman law, prohibiting over capitalization, the control of common carriers by industrials, and interlocking boards of directors.

Representative Gardner of Massachusetts replying to Stanley's defiance of his bill said today:

"The issue must soon be met whether we mean thoroughly to dissolve the trusts or whether we mean to recognize them and make them behave themselves.

"Speaking for myself and for no one else, I definitely recommend the abandonment of the policy of dissolution. In its place I hope to see thoroughly efficient control by a United States commission.

"The bills be presented to us for approval were three. The principal one ought to have been drawn by Mr. Brandeis of Boston, we, the minority, entirely approved. The other two bills were little-looking directorates, and forbid the ownership of common carriers by industrials. These two bills met with our approval.

"But we maintained in the minority report that trusts must be controlled by the United States instead of by the various States of the Union, and that they must be recapitulated at their actual value."

ARREST BOSTON MAN UPON FRAUD CHARGE

HOUSTON, Tex., Aug. 6.—Just thirty minutes before he was to leave his wife for their former home in Boston, C. N. Johnson, who said he was a broker, was arrested by detectives on a charge of embezzling $600 from his employers. The charge against Johnson is that he disposed of several carloads of watermelons and collected $500. When asked for the money he gave a check for the amount on an out-of-town bank. The check was returned marked "no funds."

HERRINGS SCARCE FOR "SARDINE" TRADE

EASTPORT, Me., Aug. 5.—The neglect of the herring schools to visit the coast of Maine with their accustomed frequency this year has resulted in a shortage of the canning supply, which threatens to send up the price of "sardines" for the year 1913. The canners usually plan to close the season with a supply of 2,000,000 cases in stock, but this year, even with the 400,000 cases carried over, there appears little prospect of securing the normal product.

PORT DIRECTORS TELL PROGRESS

The plan for the development of Commonwealth Pier, which is now owned by the State, is to be finished by the Directors of the Port of Boston, according to a decision made after a conference between the Port Directors and the Attorneys of the New Haven road.

The directors of the New Haven are to meet on August 15, and are expected to ratify this decision. After the formal approval of the Mayor, the Governor, the Council and the directors of the Boston & Maine has been secured, the Port Directors will be free to proceed with the work. This will probably be by September 15.

Among the many contemplated improvements besides the new pier, which is already more than ninety per cent. completed, are a grain elevator, a large freight shed, new railroad tracks and a broad teaming avenue, the directors announce.

C street, South Boston, is to be extended from Summer street to the pier, striking it on a level with the second story.

The new fish pier is 1,200 feet long and 160 feet wide. Its bight being fifteen feet at mean low water, with a depth of water of twenty-three feet at mean low tide.

Work on this pier was begun in the Fall of 1910 and the first stone for the heavy walls was laid in February, 1911. The walls of the pier are now completely filled and are capped for about half their length.

The work of the belt line survey has been confined solely to the territory between the Boston & Albany Railroad and the Midland division of the New Haven, the possible routes have already been surveyed and work on a third is progressing, and a train for the use of transit has been run and profiled.

TALKING DOG'S BODY TO GO TO SCIENTISTS WHEN DEATH COMES

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—In the interest of biological research, the body of Don, the famous talking dog, will go after his death into the possession of the Rockefeller Institute, satisfactory terms having been made today with Don's owner, Miss Martha Haberland.

For since Don came to America to appear at Hammerstein's the scientists have especially interested in organology and the development of man's vocal organs during their various stages of evolution have been anxious to find out whether in Don's case the mind of the animal has any control over his vocal force.

Stock Markets Waiting to Hear Wilson on Tariff

By W. H. ROSS.

STATE STREET, Aug. 6.—Midday.—The Boston market was marked by price irregularity at the opening and the tendency afterwards was downward. Most of the coppers which were dealt in shaded off. The market was dull and traders appeared to be in a waiting mood and without desire to take any initiative.

Aside from coppers, the list of fruit was weak. At the end of the first hour it was more than six points lower. American Agricultural Chemical also sagged more than one.

Second Outfit directors propose to pay for the large plantations acquired in Costa Rica to make the company independent of planters for supplies by the issuo of new stock which holders of the old may subscribe at $120 a share in the ratio of one new share for five now held. The new stock may be paid for on the basis of 10 per cent. on Sept. 10, 40 per cent. on Oct. 20 and 50 per cent. on Nov. 20. Six per cent. interest will be paid on advance payments.

It is believed in railroad circles that Senator Penrose, Republican, of Pennsylvania, New York, Ontario & Western retires from his office that President Charles H. Ewing, of the N. Y. O. & W. railroad will take charge of the former road.

N. Y. Sentiment Uncertain.

Sentiment appeared to be uncertain on the New York Exchange at the opening and the political situation was blamed for this. Reports as to the tenor of Mr. Wilson's tariff views were conflicting. There was a general disposition to wait until they have been learned through his acceptance speech before taking any decided market position.

Prices changes were slight when trading began, but recessions throughout the list were caused by an early selling movement. St. Paul was ¼ lower at the opening set and later lost another ⅝. Nearly all the leaders were from ⅛ to ¼ off at the end of a quarter of an hour. Including Erie common, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Reading, Amalgamated Copper and Brooklyn Rapid Transit.

Lehigh Valley was hard hit in the near movement, dropping 1¾ from Monday's close. Canadian Pacific lost ½, but later recovered and gained ½ over last night's close, going to 277½. The curb was firm. Americans in London were firm, but receded from their highest.

The London copper metal market reopened today after being closed for two days because of holidays and spot and futures were each 2s. 6d. higher. The market was strong.

Now that business is resumed in earnest there is much talk of the effect of the Democratic victory, but the demand is likely to be held back until the tariff bill is passed and signed. Reports on Thursday and Friday of last week will be issued the Association's figures for July production, which are expected to be large. Reports have been numerous that there will be an increase as soon as buying is resumed in earnest. Morrison, Kelsevich & Co. have written F. W. Mithen & Co. from London: "Very soon consumers all around will have to buy heavily and we look for a rise in prices, especially on the Continental market, which still remains the low centre of the world's prices."

It is believed in the trade that the statement issued on August 1 did not vary materially in amount from the July 1 report.

United Fruit Stock Increase.

United Fruit Company directors have voted to increase authorized capital from $35,000,000 to $45,000,000, and at a special meeting on November 5, stockholders will vote on the proposition. The plan is to offer the new stock, which, like the old, will have a par value of $100 a share, to shareholders at $125 a share. Those who take the new stock will be entitled to a cash dividend of $1.50 a share for every share at the rate of one new share for every five held.

The Boston News Bureau says: "During part of the past four years the directors have declared extra dividends of 10 per cent., which were in large part applied toward subscription to new stock at par. Instead of doing this they now stock dividends. The present offering differs from the four preceding in that it is not to be paid for from the earnings of the current year, but from the surplus. $9,000,000 of new money, but on which the company will get the dividends on the subscription privilege. With the increased stock outstanding the company will still be earning double its present 8 per cent. dividend, and the properties to be acquired with the new money will insure it a continuous source of fruit for years to come, and will do away with the necessities of known contracts."

Financial News in Brief.

It is announced in Cincinnati that J. P. Morgan & Co. will finance the new Union Station at that place, which is now in use. Original plans called for the erection of a structure to cost $6,000,000. As the public is not "digesting" bonds very rapidly at present, the proposed building has been reduced. The station will be a terminal for steam and interurban lines.

Gross earnings of railroads for the first calendar month reported will exceed those of the same period last year by 10.26 per cent. Net earnings will show an increase of $1,500,000 in net earnings.

Railway earnings for the second week for the first month reported have been more than double those of 1911. Gross are 12½ per cent. per pound cot., and a $21,000,000 profit in operating profits should now be reported at the rate of $1,150,000 per annum, or nearly $10.00 per share.

Reports of fifty representative railroads show an aggregate increase of nearly $5,000,000 in gross earnings for the first calendar month, which is better than 10 per cent. These roads operate about half the country's mileage.

U. S. AGENT STARTS UP AMAZON TO PROBE TORTURE OF NATIVES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Stuart Fuller, the State Department's agent sent to investigate the alleged atrocities committed on Indians in the Putumayo rubber country of Peru, has started with a British consul for the headwaters of the Amazon.

The Peruvian government has erected a powerful wireless telegraph station in the rubber country, which is capable of establishing communication over the country to Lima.

It has been suggested a question over the ownership of the territory in which the rubber fields are located might offer difficulty in the negotiations for suppression of atrocities upon the natives. Brazil, Chili and Peru once disputed title to the property. Colombia claims to feel that she has an ancient title to the property.

POLICE SAVE WOMEN WHEN FIRE MENACES HYDE PARK HOTEL

A dozen women were taken to the street by policemen early today when fire threatened the Fairmount House, at Nos. 101-111 Fairmount avenue, Hyde Park. All of the occupants, numbering more than fifty, were awakened by the fire engines. Many rushed to the street in fright, some but scantily clad.

The fire started in the attic of No. 101, and the timely discovery of it by Jennie Scott, one of the employes, undoubtedly prevented heavy loss. She was asleep on the second floor when she smelled the smoke. She got out of bed and rushed upstairs, where she found several mattresses afire. The attic is unoccupied. She immediately ran out and sounded an alarm. Then she rushed back and awakened the occupants.

In the meantime Patrolmen Tyler and Flaherty of the Hyde Park station arrived. They made use of a ladder to help women get out some of the womenfolk, more than a dozen of whom they escorted to the street.

Ladders had to be used to get up to the attic because the hallways were filled with smoke. By quick work, they managed to extinguish the blaze, preventing its spread to the adjoining buildings. The damage was slight. The cause is unknown. The building at No. 101 is owned by R. J. Lenton.

FALL RIVER MAYOR WELCOMES AID IN GAS COMPANY FIGHT

FALL RIVER, Aug. 6.—Mayor Thomas F. Higgins declared that it is a shame that the Fall River Gas Company appropriated its surplus of $241,500 and then come boldly before the Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners for permission to issue more than 1,000 shares of additional stock to pay its debts.

What should have been done, it is declared here, as it was pointed out in an editorial in the AMERICAN, was that the company pay its indebtedness from its surplus. This is what Mayor Higgins had in mind when he said:

"I think it is a down right shame. The gas works company ought to have used the dividends to wipe out its debts. At the proper time the people of Fall River will have something to say on this matter and it is a certainty that they will not permit such things to be done if there is a remedy to stop it. I will welcome aid and all assistance toward putting an end to this sort of thing."

ELECTRICITY SOON TO ABOLISH HUNGER, PREDICTS SAVANT

PARIS, Aug. 6.—Hunger is shortly to be abolished by electricity. Such is the prophecy of Professor Berthelot, who explained the method to the congress of the society for the advancement of science now in session at Nimes.

Begouie recalled the experiments of Professor Berthelot, who claimed that within a generation steaks and other foods would be replaced by small pills containing the necessary chemical constituents to sustain life. Begouie added that what chemistry had not accomplished electricity will accomplish through "high frequency current." Therefore, we may shortly live by ordering five electric currents at intervals of seven seconds instead of soup.

PLAN SHORTER B. & A. ROUTE FROM PALMER TO SHELBURNE FALLS

The New York Central is considering a plan by which tracks may be built from Shelburne Falls to Palmer to enable the Boston & Albany to divert freight traffic from its present route from Albany to Palmer, according to the Boston News Bureau.

According to the proposition the tracks of the Fitchburg from its connection with the main line of the New York Central in the Mohawk Valley, N. Y., will be used to carry freight over the Hoosac tunnel route to Shelburne Falls.

It is said that the building of the new line from Shelburne Falls to Palmer by way of Amherst would afford a route at least 25 miles shorter than the present Boston & Albany route through Albany, Pittsfield and Springfield.

CULPEPPER, VA., IS SWEPT BY FLAMES; WIRES ALL DOWN

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 6.—A disastrous fire has been sweeping today in Culpepper, a Virginia town of 3,000 inhabitants, and at latest reports was still raging. All wire communication was broken off at 3 a. m., the last message saying that a large area had been destroyed at that hour, and that the entire town was threatened with destruction.

A telephone message from a neighboring town at 9 a. m. said that all wires were down in Culpepper and that the latest report from there was to the effect that the fire was still sweeping through the entire business section of the town.

VAIL OUTLINES INSURANCE PLAN

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Theodore N. Vail, president of the Western Union Telegraph Company, has sent a circular to the employes, asking them to vote on insurance plans. Attached to the circular were blanks, on which the telegraph operators are to indicate whether they want a temporary disability, accident, or a life insurance plan. The circular says in part:

"I take this opportunity to express my hearty thanks for the many letters and words of approval from employes, expressing their appreciation of the provisional pension plan and of our efforts to further improve the conditions of the employes."

A draft of the demands of the telegraphers was completed by the grievance committee. In addition to asking for the abolition of the black-listing of union men, a minimum wage rate is demanded.

President Charles J. Hughes of the Pittsburgh branch of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America conferred with National President S. J. Konenkamp with reference to the plan to have all branches of the union appoint grievance committees. President Konenkamp said that the New York committee will take no action until locals in other cities have been heard from.

Concerning President Vail's insurance plans, President Konenkamp said: "What the telegraphers would like to know first is what security they have for remaining long enough in the employment of the company to be the beneficiaries of its relief plans. They want liberty to become members of the union if they so wish without being liable to dismissal."

FIGHT TO FINISH IN NEW BEDFORD

NEW BEDFORD, Aug. 6.—The striking weavers have declared for a fight to the finish. No quarter is the order of the executive committee.

The weavers have thrown over all peaceful methods and announce that they stand just where they did at the beginning of the strike, namely, for the total abolition of the grading system.

"We are willing to meet the manufacturers upon equal terms and under no other conditions," was the statement given out after a meeting of the executive committee of the Weavers' Union at which the report of the subcommittee appointed Saturday night and which held a meeting Sunday, was made.

None of the plans for settlement that were suggested to the weavers' executive committee were thought feasible and all were thrown aside and it was voted tonight to stand alone on the last and single issue, "abolish the grading system."

The executive committee heard most favorable reports at the meeting tonight from President Samuel Connors and Treasurer Wearing, who went to Fall River to get the $1,000 that the executive committee of the Federation of Civil Weavers voted to them Sunday with promises of more.

While in Fall River some other funds were turned over to the officials of the Weavers' Union, and a call of the Weavers' in Fall River was most gratifying to the New Bedford officials.

There is $33,000 now in the treasury of the Fall River Union, and the New Bedford weavers could have it all, every cent of it, they were told, and if necessary the Fall River Union would mortgage its building to raise additional funds for the New Bedford Union to fight the grading system.

The Democratic Platform and the Opinion of the Nation

It is more than Dr. Wilson's privilege to reject a platform which misrepresents the Democracy and embarrasses himself—it is his duty both to himself and to the citizens

MR. WILSON is being advised to reject part of the Democratic platform. He might well be advised to reject practically all of it. The Democratic House has ignored or repudiated the most commendable planks of the platform, and there is no reason why Wilson should be burdened in the coming campaign by the ramshackle remaining planks. The Democratic platform declared that "our pledges are made to be kept." The Democratic House, the one branch of the national government which the Democrats control, has already proven that the best provision in the platform was made only to be broken.

With the navy plank and one or two other Democratic and desirable planks eliminated, the platform is left undemocratic, unscientific and unsound. It is left undemocratic, unscientific and scandalously, in absurdly extreme, in one point and scandalously inadequate in nearly every other point. It is absolutely without constructive policy or comprehensive understanding of the urgent needs of the people and the irresistible tendencies of the times.

The platform, though made by Bryan, was made for Wilson. The usual procedure at conventions was reversed, and the platform was made after the nomination of the candidate. It was Mr. Bryan's idea, and a characteristic one, that the principles of the Democratic party should be modified to suit the candidate rather than the candidate selected to fit the principles of the Democratic party. Yet this platform cannot suit the candidate, for Wilson's hardly a word in it that is in accordance with his recent utterances since he ceased to be a reactionary and became a militant progressive. The country demanded a progressive candidate and a progressive program.

The Democracy has given the country as its candidate a convert to progressive principles, yet there are but few planks in the platform which echo his progressive sentiments or express the progressive spirit of this progressive age. The country expected, and had a right to expect, from a conscientious and courageous Democrat a constructive platform; yet there is hardly a paragraph in the platform which is constructive.

There is hardly a paragraph which offers a satisfactory solution of the conditions it criticises, or proposes a practicable remedy for the evils of which the citizens so justly complain.

The platform is Bryan's, and is a characteristic combination of Bryan's ignorance and egotism. He has sacrificed the real issues of progressive Democracy to substitute his own visionary views and fantastic fancies. It is more than Dr. Wilson's privilege to reject a platform which misrepresents the Democracy and embarrasses himself—it is his duty both to himself and to the citizens.

Dr. Wilson is in a peculiar and a delicate position before the country. There are many devoted Democrats still in doubt as to his actual attitude and his permanent position upon the leading issues of the day. A platform, therefore, which does not express accurately and aggressively Wilson's actual views must cause embarrassment to him and to the Democracy as well, since those skeptical citizens who doubt the genuineness of Dr. Wilson's conversion to progressive principles will have their doubts confirmed by a platform which contains few positive or progressive utterances other than the unsound and extreme plank on the tariff.

The tariff plank reflects Bryan's free trade views and recalls Bryan's attitude as a Congressman. At that time he called the manufacturers "robbers" and the workingmen "their dupes," and he appeared before the Ways and Means Committee to present their arguments in favor of the principle of protection.

Evidently Bryan's views have not changed. Always violent and always visionary, he is more ready to destroy than resourceful to construct.

The most positive plank in the platform is the tariff plank. That plank declares that the Federal government has no right or power to collect tariff duties except for the purposes of revenue.

That plank repudiates the whole protective theory and concludes with an appeal to the American people "to support us in our demands for a tariff for revenue only."

There is some modification of this declaration in the text of the plank, but as a whole the tariff plank boldly brings into question the whole theory of protection and makes the Democratic party a fight on the basis of a tariff for revenue only, against the Republican idea of a tariff for protection and development of home industries.

The Democratic plank declares that protection does not tend to increase the wages of American workmen, but that those wages are determined by the competitive system.

If, however, the tariff tends to develop new industries and in that way to give employment to a greater number of men, it will be difficult for the Democrats to argue that the tariff does not increase the demand for labor, and, therefore, tend to increase the price of labor.

If the reduction of the tariff to the point of the basis of revenue only would tend to eliminate any considerable number of American industries it would be difficult for the Democrats to argue that the men employed in those industries thrown out of work and there upon the labor market would not tend to reduce the price of labor, which is wages, through the very competitive system which the Democrats allude to.

True enough, the greater the demand for labor the higher the price of labor.

But the demand for labor is made through the number and extent of the industries requiring labor and employing labor. And when that demand is lessened through the elimination of any considerable number of those American industries, then the price of employment is increased and the price of labor is reduced.

For the Democrats, therefore, to make their proposition sound, they must prove that the protective tariff does not tend to increase the number of industries in this country and the employment of labor by those industries.

The plank contains, however, proper criticism of President Taft for his veto of the farmers' free list, the wooden schedule and other reasonable and legitimate and moderate plans of tariff reduction proposed by the Democratic House of Representatives under the leadership of Champ Clark.

The second plank in the Democratic platform relates to the high cost of living and says that the high cost of living is due to the high tariff laws enacted and maintained by the Republican party and to the trusts and commercial conspiracies fostered and encouraged by such laws.

The high cost of living is not confined to the United States, and, therefore, cannot be wholly due to any strictly American institution, not even to the Republican party.

The high cost of living is complained of in England and has brought about many strikes and much discontent in that country.

The high cost of living is complained of in France and has brought about riots in that country.

The high cost of living is complained of in Germany and has brought about discontent and disturbance in that country.

The Republican party of the United States does not exercise much influence in England or France or Germany.

Neither do our tariff conditions nor any other tariff conditions, because England is a free trade country and Germany is a protection country.

The high cost of living must, therefore, be due to other and broader propositions than those discovered by the Democrats such as assembled at Baltimore.

It must be due to universal conditions, for in every country of the world the cost of living has increased enormously.

What are those universal conditions? First, the greater cheapness of money, the enormous production of gold and the general extension of credits. Those conditions have made the medium of exchange so much cheaper that a dollar today does not buy what fifty cents or even twenty-five cents would have bought a few years ago.

The farmers themselves, on account of the quantity of them, being less valuable, it takes many more of those dollars to buy the same thing than it took a few years ago. That is one of the main reasons for the increased cost of living.

Another important and universal reason for the increased cost of living is the better compensation given in these days to the producing classes for their work and for their products.

The greater intelligence and the greater efficiency of the workingmen and the farmer and other producers have enabled them to get a more rightful reward for their effort, a higher reward for labor, a greater enjoyment for their product.

All intelligent citizens want the farmers to be well-to-do, yet they cannot be well-to-do unless they are paid high prices for their products and they cannot be paid high prices for their products without compelling a high cost of living to the consuming public.

All intelligent citizens want the workingman to receive high wages, but the workingman cannot receive high wages without increasing the cost of production of the articles on which he labors, and the cost of production of those articles cannot be increased without increasing the high cost of living.

The cost of living will never be reduced in these days of cheap money will remain cheap, and, in all probability, become cheaper. Farmers will continue to be well paid for their work, and will become even better paid.

Laborers will continue to secure higher wages, and should continue to secure higher wages.

This means that the cost of living will not be materially reduced except in certain forced and unnatural cases of combinations to secure unjust and unreasonable prices.

But, while the cost of living is not to be reduced, the remedy is to increase the income of the individual to enable him to meet the increased cost of living.

The evil of extortion of high prices might be overcome by Federal incorporation to supervise and to regulate all trusts and combinations and by empowering the government to fix the prices of the products of such trusts and combinations.

This phase of the situation the Democratic platform has not touched upon, and the causes of the high cost of living, due to the greater cheapness of money and to the greater reward to the producing classes, the Democratic platform does not seem to comprehend.

To lay to the Republican party the blame for the conditions which exist all over the world is an absurdity.

And to fail to have a constructive plank on one of the most important issues before this country and all other countries is an evidence of ignorance and incapacity.

A further evidence of ignorance and incapacity is exhibited in the anti-trust plank, the third plank of the Democratic platform. The policy of the Democratic party is apparently Mr. Taft's policy of enforced competition, the policy which proved so disastrous to business and so absolutely valueless to the consuming public when pressed to its ultimate conclusion under the Taft administration.

The dissolution of the Oil Trust and the Tobacco Trust resulted in no benefit to the consumer whatever.

It resulted only in an apparent advantage to these companies and an enormous increase in the value of their securities.

Competition has not been restored because competition cannot be compelled.

Prices have not been reduced, but, on the contrary, have been increased.

The only advantage to business, or to the community, has come through a certain security and confidence which business has been restored, and a certain confidence due to the conviction that they are now conducting their combination along legal lines.

Nothing, however, has been accomplished for the consuming public, and nothing will be accomplished until the government is empowered to supervise and regulate the formation of combinations and further empowered to fix prices.

The fundamental importance of this fact is not recognized or understood by the Democrats who wrote the platform at Baltimore, and the platform has no practical constructive policy in this third important issue before our country.

The fourth plank in the Democratic platform discusses States rights.

There has been considerable Democratic outcry about the invasion of States rights and very little to complain of. Under the Taft administration the Federal government are very clearly defined by the Constitution.

The Federal influence can only proceed to a certain point.

In many cases it ought for the benefit of the whole community to be able to proceed further.

But it will not be able to proceed further on account of the very definite restrictions of the Constitution.

To take a concrete example, there can be State incorporation acts and Federal incorporation acts for the regulation and supervision of trusts. But the State incorporation acts can be made to apply only to combinations existing and operating within the State, while the Federal incorporation act can only apply to trusts and combinations engaged in interstate commerce.

Of course, all trusts and combinations engaged in interstate commerce should be compelled to go under the federal incorporation act for the sake of uniformity and to prevent them from taking advantage of the lax laws of certain States to the injury of the community.

Still, with all the advantages of Federal incorporation, trusts and combinations operating merely within the State cannot be compelled to come under such an act.

Therefore, obviously enough, the field and the power of Federal and States rights are clearly and sufficiently defined.

The objection of the Democrats to the legitimate exercise of Federal powers, where they exist and are guaranteed by the Constitution, is a baseless one.

As a matter of fact, in the conduct of the business of this great country, the Federal government should often have greater powers than it has and can have under the Constitution. And in order to secure a uniformity of laws in the different States as the best possible substitute for Federal laws, where Federal laws are not possible, the co-operation of all the States should be encouraged and such expedients as the congress of governors begun under Mr. Roosevelt's administration, should be continued with a view to securing that end.

It is unfortunate that the Democratic platform did not make some such recommendations as these.

The Democratic platform next approves of the income tax and popular election of senators by the people. For these planks those who have acted toward putting those measures in effect.

These measures, inaugurated by the Populists, incorporated then into three successive Democratic platforms and finally endorsed and enforced by the Republican administration, are matters of universal congratulation.

The Democrats have done their share toward advancing these measures to fulfillment, and can properly take a good part of the credit for their success.

It is unfortunate, however, that in this so-called progressive platform the only measures distinctly and definitely recommended are the measures which are already, for the most part, achieved.

The next plank in the Democratic platform declares for presidential primaries in the election of delegates to the national convention.

This plank is inadequate and unprogressive. It is worse than worthless, since it merely pretends to offer a solution. Its suggestion is not a solution.

It proposes a remedy which will not remedy the conditions that the people object to; yet offers the stone of pretence instead of the bread of performance.

The uselessness of Presidential primaries followed by a convention in which the delegates may defy the expressed will of the people has been shown by the convention at Baltimore.

The vast majority of delegates elected by Presidential primaries to that convention were elected to vote for Champ Clark and instructed to vote for Champ Clark.

But Mr. Bryan, like many other delegates in that convention, repudiated his instructions, denied the right of the people to express their choice through Presidential primaries, assumed a superior right for himself and not only refused to vote for Champ Clark, but did his worst to defeat Champ Clark, the choice of the people of his State and his district.

There will be other delegates to other conventions as objectionable as Mr. Bryan, with as little morality and as little sense of right and decency as Mr. Bryan.

Other delegates elected by Presidential primaries, perhaps following Mr. Bryan's leadership and citing Mr. Bryan's example, will refuse to accept the instructions of their constituents, will refuse to vote according to the expressed will of the people in Presidential primaries and will vote according to themselves to defeat the will of the people and to vote according to the will of the corporations expressed in the platform of any party.

For a Presidential primary to be effective there must be no convention, no delegates with so much power and so little character as to fail to carry out the people's will.

The next President must be nominated by direct primaries without any convention and without any delegates with power to unscrupulous and unreliable representatives.

The next President must be nominated by direct primaries, and the man who gets the greatest number of votes according to the official vote of the State must be the nominee of the party.

When the Democratic convention failed to declare in favor of such a just and genuine direct primary it failed conspicuously to be progressive or even to be Democratic.

The next plank of the Democratic platform relates to campaign contributions. The plank pledges the Democratic party to the enactment of a law prohibiting any corporations from contributing to a campaign fund. The only objection to such laws is their inadequacy.

What is the fact, neither this proposition nor the following one, where any individual is prohibited from contributing an amount above a reasonable minimum, is of any particular value.

If an individual wishes to contribute a large sum he can always do it through various other individuals, and the beneficiaries of special legislation can always manage to secure contributions, like campaign contributions, in spite of restrictions of this kind.

The only method of preventing corruption in elections is not to try to limit contributions, but actually to limit expenditures.

What is needed is a law which will allow expenditures for literature, speeches and other means of informing the people, which will allow expenditures for any legitimate appeal to the intelligence and consciences of the people, but which will not allow any other expenditure whatsoever, and which will define any other expenditure as bribery and punish it as such.

When we have a law of that kind we shall have clean elections. There will be no objection to spending money if it is spent merely for the information of the voters, but there will be no need for any great expenditure of money on such a basis.

If any other expenditure of money is made, the individual so expending it or causing it to be expended can be arrested and imprisoned as a briber and deprived of his seat if elected to office.

Nations, like England, who really desire to prevent the use of money corruptly in elections, have such laws and have destroyed corruption in politics through them.

The proposition in the Democratic platform is ridiculously inadequate and apparently insincere.

The next plank relates to the term of President, and favors a six-year term in accordance with the expressed desire of every trust and every criminal corporation in the United States.

A President elected one term without hope of reelection need have no consideration for the people whatever. He cannot be punished by the people, he cannot be rewarded by the people.

There is no better Democrat than Thomas Jefferson, the founder of the Democratic party, and in discussing this question he said:

"My opinion originally was that the President of the United States should have been elected for seven years, and be forever ineligible afterward. But since become sensible that seven years is too long to be irremovable, and that there should be a peaceable way of withdrawing a man in midway who is doing wrong."

It is obvious that Jefferson considered the four-year term in the nature of a recall. It gave the people in the midst of a Presidential term an opportunity to approve or disapprove of the President's performances up to that time. It made him subject to the will of the people and continually mindful of the wishes of the people.

This plank in the Democratic platform is worse than undemocratic, worse than reactionary. It removes the President from the control of the people, and makes him more than ever in the control of the privileged interests. It is an absolute contradiction of the progressive plan to place the Government more directly in the hands of the people.

It is contrary to the expressed declaration of the founder of the Democratic party. It is a concession to the desires of the special interests. It brings into strong contrast the Democratic policies of Jefferson and the unsound and insincere policies of William Jennings Bryan.

Jefferson was a man of practical experience and sound common sense, genuinely devoted to the people.

Bryan is an unsound theorist, without definite policy and without genuine concern for anything policy and without genuine concern for anything but his own advancement, trimming and trading and compromising and evading to make a momentary point at the expense of a permanent policy and a recognized right.

The paragraph referring to the navy, and pledging the Democratic party to a navy adequate to the needs of the nation and to the support of the principle of the Monroe Doctrine, is exceedingly important, not only as a profession of Democratic faith, but as an evidence of Democratic sincerity.

The question of an adequate navy has already come before the Democratic House of Representatives. This Democratic platform says that "our pledges are made to be kept when in office as well as relied upon during the campaign."

The Democratic party wholly in power in the House of Representatives failed utterly to carry out its pledge in regard to an adequate navy. It has, therefore, absolutely destroyed the confidence of the country in any of the few positive promises and progressive utterances of its platform.

The Senate reported a bill which provided for an adequate navy. A good part of the Democrats in the Senate voted for that bill.

But the Democratic party is not in control of the Senate. It is, however, in full control of the House of Representatives and will undoubtedly be held to account for the irresponsible and unpatriotic action of its majority in the House of Representatives, when the platform of the Democratic party declared for an adequate navy and when the platform definitely stated "our pledges are made to be kept."

When, in the face of these positive utterances, the promise of a navy adequate to the needs is not kept, how can the intelligent citizens of this country believe that any plank or promise of the Democratic platform will be kept?

The Democrats themselves digged the pit into which they have fallen. They created the opportunity to prove their sincerity or their utter insincerity. Their action in promptly repudiating the most meritorious plank of their platform is discredited both from party professions and from patriotism.

The paragraph relating to railroads, express companies, telegraph and telephone lines is not a progressive utterance in any particular.

It is a weaker utterance than the progressive utterance in that paragraph that is not already in operation, and nothing demanded that is not a dodge or a straddle or an evasion of the actual issue.

Like so many other of the planks or paragraphs of the platform, is meaningless and worthless; where the opportunity occurs for a statement of progressive principle, the platform dodges it in a cowardly manner.

This is another evidence of Mr. Bryan's unsound and insincere influence. At one time he goes to the extreme length in one direction of government ownership of everything, and now he swings to the discreditable length in the other direction of abandoning even the proper, practicable proposition of the government ownership of telegraphs.

The next plank in the platform deals with banking legislation, and here the Democratic party is absolutely without plan or policy or programme.

It opposes the Aldrich bill, probably without actually knowing what the Aldrich bill provides in its amended form.

But assuming that its opposition to the Aldrich bill is genuine and sincere what has it substituted for the Aldrich bill? What proposition has the Democratic party to make to improve the financial conditions which are universally conceded to need improvement?

The last panic demonstrated the absolute necessity of new banking legislation, and yet the Democratic party, in spite of its knowledge of past history and with all its recent experience, has nothing to offer in the way of a plan, has nothing to say except to condemn a plan which has been offered by the opposition party.

The Democratic party cannot expect the people of this country to have confidence in it or respect for it unless it gives some evidence of thought and intelligence and of careful consideration and genuine information on this and other important matters before the country and demanding solution.

The plank in the platform in regard to rural credit is proper enough, although not a very positive or definite statement of a policy.

The best plank in the platform is the next one, which relates to the waterways. This can be commended throughout.

The plank regarding the post roads is an excellent one and might have been made more vigorous and effective in its statement.

When a Democratic member of Congress I introduced a bill to this effect, which did not at the time secure the support of the Democratic minority.

The Democratic plank on the rights of labor is a good plank, and if the nominees for President and Vice-President will adhere strictly to this plank they will do much to overcome the weakness of their personal labor records.

The Democratic plank on Conservation is another discouraging evidence of the lack of true progressive principle and true Democratic principle of many planks in the platform.

The plank is composed of more or less meaningless generalities.

It does not declare in favor of government ownership or control of the water powers which is one of the main issues in the progressive conservation programme of this time.

It is astonishing that this country and that a pretended progressive party of this country should lag behind all parties of other countries in such important and essential progressive matters.

In Canada, the necessity for the government controlling the water powers has already been recognized and acknowledged. Neither party in Canada would fail to admit and to state this necessity and as a matter of actual fact the Canadian government will no longer grant water powers to private individuals in outright ownership, but will only lease them or sell the power developed from them.

It is obvious that electric power developed by water power is to be the motive power of the future, and the immediate future, and a pretended progressive platform which does not deal with this vital question is not progressive, not worthy of consideration by genuine progressives.

Again, in these conservation planks no attack is made upon the timber thieves and the plunder of the public domain by the railroads who exchanged thousands of worthless sections of desert land for the most valuable timber land in the United States.

This section of the platform exhibits the same cowardice which disgraces so many other sections, and which prevents the platform from being considered in any way an honest progressive document.

The plank in regard to agriculture is harmless enough and meaningless enough, for that matter. Such recommendations as it makes should properly be made, and many others that it does not make should properly be made.

The plank in regard to the merchant marine shows an utter lack of constructive policy or constructive ability.

It declares in favor of a merchant marine without giving the slightest evidence of how it is to be developed or encouraged.

It opposes the granting of subsidies without substituting any other plan.

It does not even declare for the old Democratic policy of preferential duties.

After a few harmless and meaningless declarations about the civil service and law reform, the Democratic platform takes up the question of the Philippines, and, influenced by the small American-ism of William J. Bryan, suggests that the Philippines be abandoned.

Here again we have a contrast between the practical Democracy of Thomas Jefferson, who added the whole of the Louisiana territory to the area of the United States, more than doubling that area, and the visionary ideas and narrow views of William Jennings Bryan, who desires to abandon what the country already possesses and to limit the nation's growth to the petty boundaries of his own prejudices.

A party with a policy of contraction abroad and reaction at home cannot hope for the support of either progressive or patriotic citizens.

Arizona and New Mexico are welcomed by the Democracy into the United States, and while these States were admitted under a Republican administration, their admission was largely due to the activity of the Democrats in Congress in their behalf.

The plank in the Democratic platform in regard to Alaska is an excellent one and every effort should be made to make its provisions speedily operative.

The plank in regard to the Russian treaty should in common justice and generosity include a compliment to President Taft for his splendid work in abrogating that treaty.

The question involved is a question which affected every American citizen and affected the dignity and honor of the nation as a whole. The Jews might have been more intimately affected than any other class of our citizenship, but every citizen was affronted by the failure of Russia to recognize the passport issued by our government to any citizen.

Mr. Taft may have earned the special gratitude of our Jewish citizens, but he also earned in a high degree the approval and applause of every patriotic American citizen who feels that the dignity of our country should be upheld and the honor of our government sustained throughout the world.

In the plank on the parcels post and rural delivery the Democrats claim credit in justice and generosity have praised President Taft, under whose administration the rural delivery and parcels post are being developed.

And in the plank on the Panama Canal Exposition the Democrats could properly have arisen above party lines and paid some compliment to the Taft administration which did so much for the Panama Exposition and to the Roosevelt administration which made the Panama Canal possible.

The platform concludes with an empty plank and hollow utterance relative to the "rule of the people," which could have emanated only from William Jennings Bryan, and which it would be an insult to attribute to any other member of the platform committee.

The whole progressive programme is based upon a genuine and sincere policy of restoring the power of government to the people as the source of power. Without this power of government reposed in the hands of the people it is impossible for the people to accomplish any of the things which this platform or more genuine platforms may declare for.

The failure, therefore, to restore the power of government to the people is the fundamental point by which the power of government can be restored to the people, is high treason to the progressive cause.

No trading, trimming traitor ever evolved a more treacherous plank than the one which concludes the Democratic platform.

As far back as five years ago William Jennings Bryan declared in a speech in Brooklyn that the fundamental principles of progressive Democracy were the initiative, the referendum, the recall and direct primaries, and that no Democrat could be recognized as a Democrat who did not believe in these principles.

And yet Mr. Bryan puts forth this professed progressive Democratic platform without one reference to the initiative, the referendum, the recall or even direct primaries.

This is either contemptible cowardice or disgraceful treachery and should be branded as such.

It must be, and may be meant to be, particularly embarrassing to Dr. Wilson, who but lately became a convert to the cause of progressive Democracy and to the principles of the initiative, the referendum, the recall and direct primaries.

Dr. Wilson has, however, advocated these principles with the ardor of a new convert and has convinced many of his sincerity.

How will Dr. Wilson stand on this plank in this platform? Will he be compelled to return to his former reactionary views, or will he repudiate Bryan and Bryan's treasonable plank and declare boldly and bravely for direct primaries and direct legislation, the essential principles of the progressive cause?

This platform as a whole is no platform for a progressive to stand on. It is a compromise from beginning to end. It is a cowardly evasion in nearly every plank. It lacks courage and it lacks constructive policy.

Its policy throughout is a policy of opposition, without the substitution of a practicable plan to any policy it opposes.

Whether this is due to ignorance or insincerity is immaterial. It deprives the progressives of all hope in the Democratic party. It deprives the citizens of the country of all confidence in the Democratic party.

A party without a popular policy will be a party without popular support.

It is Dr. Wilson's opportunity and Dr. Wilson's duty to write a platform which will do justice to himself and to the Democratic party, which will arouse the enthusiasm of all genuine Democrats and invite the support of all genuine progressives.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.
